Bradley Reorganizes Veterans' Agency

Japan Told Occupation Could End Within Year

Eichelberger Bases His View on Good Conduct; MacArthur Shuts Down Domei

Tokyo, (Saturday), Sept. 15, (AP). Japan was told today occupation may end within a year but in the harsh realities of the present her only news agency was suspended, her suspected war criminals were held or hunted, and two more high militarists were dead by their own hand.

Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, whose U. S. Eighth Army led the occupation forces into Japan, declared "if the Japs continue acting as they are now within a year this thing should be washed up."

"When an insular country loses its land, sea and air power and is without raw materials and has big countries sitting on its flanks it can't be much of a threat," he told a press conference.

MacAuthur Makes Prediction

General MacAuthur, in another statement, agreed with the view of Japan's thoroughly beaten position, but said nothing about such an early termination of the occupation—far earlier than most previous reports had calculated.

The supreme command took note of "some impatience in the press based upon the assumption of a so-called soft policy in Japan" and said this was "an erroneous concept of what is occurring."

MacArthur declared the first phase of the occupation—which some critics have called "soft"—was based on military considerations of "safety and security" while occupation troops were being deployed and war prisoners and internees were being liberated.

He said "over half of the enemy's force in Japan proper is now demobilized" and disarming of the three million or more soldiers in the empire's home army would be nearly complete by mid-October.

Terms to Be Fulfilled

When the first phase is completed, MacArthur continued, Japan will then be required to take other steps and "no one need have any doubt about prompt, complete, entire fulfillment of the terms of surrender."

Whereupon his officers descended upon the headquarters of Domei Agency, threw guards round all exits, and shut it down.

Since 1936 all Japanese daily newspapers have printed the news and propaganda of this semiofficial agency which spoke for the militarist clique and told the Japanese people only what was considered good for them.

Asked what the Japanese newspapers would print, MacArthur's public relations officer declared that American news services were available.

At the Army's prodding, Japanese newspapers agreed to print the barbarities committed by their military against war prisoners "to

Tigers Down A's, 1-0, on Steal Home

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—The league-leading Detroit Tigers at least maintained their status quo here today when they edged out the Athletics, 1-0, in a five-inning game that was brought to a sudden end by a violent rainstorm.

The rainstorm was as nothing, though, compared to the violence of protesting Catcher Buddy Rosar, butt of the Tigers' only scoring effort, a steal home by Bob Maier.

This was the setup: Dick Fowler and Les Mueller were in a tight pitching duel when Maier singled in the fifth. Paul Richards beat one out and both runners moved up on Mueller's sacrifice. Joe Hoover was passed intentionally to fill the bases.

On Fowler's first pitch to Skeeter Webb, Maier dashed for home on what apparently was intended as a squeeze play, but Rosar had called for a pitchout and Maier was caught 10 feet from the plate. Ball in hand, Rosar advanced to tag out the runner, who dove under the catcher, leaving obvious spike marks way out of the base line.

Rosar did not tag Maier, who tapped home plate with his hand, but Rosar violently protested that Maier had gone out of the base line. Umpire Art Passarella didn't think so and thumbed Rosar from the game. Soon after, a deluge halted proceedings and following a half-hour wait the game was called, with the score, 1-0, in favor of Detroit.

Mead to Fight House Version Of Jobless Pay

Senate Gets Bill; Action Next Week Is Now Indicated

By the Associated Press

Chairman George (D., Ga.), submitted the sharply revised unemployment compensation bill to the Senate yesterday. Senator Mead (D., N. Y.) announced he would help fight to restore to it a guarantee of Nationwide payments up to $25 a week.

George said it would be several days before a formal committee report would be made on the measure. Senate action, however, may come next week.

Mead said in a statement that the original plan of Federal payments to round out State rates to as high as $25 a week for 26 weeks "represents a minimum standard below which we cannot go without endangering the health and welfare of a vast number of our warworkers."

Meanwhile the full Banking Committee was called to meet Tuesday to consider a subcommittee-approved draft of the so-called full employment bill. This draft declares it to be the responsibility of the Federal Government to see that all Americans able and wanting to work shall have jobs.

The stage for further action on both measures was set late yesterday, when the Finance Committee voted to send the revised jobless pay bill to the floor and when the Banking Subcommittee completed its controversial work.

Action on the jobless pay bill cannot come in the Seante until Tuesday at the earliest. When it does hit the floor the author of its previously worded language, Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) means to start his fight anew.

In addition to his futile arguments before the committee for a $25 guaranteed top, Kilgore has

150-Mile Wind Races Toward South Florida

Massive Hurricane Expected to Strike Near Miami Today

Miami, Fla., Sept. 14 (AP).—Whirled northward by winds reaching a peak velocity of 150 miles per hour, a massive tropical hurricane at least 100 miles wide was raging toward the Florida coast tonight amid expectations that it would strike the United States mainland early Saturday afternoon.

All along the south Florida "Gold Coast" buildings and houses were being battened down.

At 4:30 p. m. (Eastern war time) the United States Weather Bureau in Miami ordered hurricane warnings hoisted over a 169-mile front extending from Fort Lauderdale southward to the Florida Keys and Dry Tortugas.

Urge Evacuation.

The Weather Bureau said the main core of the storm could be expected to pass south of Miami, probably over the thin strip of islands known as "The Keys," and warned persons in exposed locations to evacuate to safety tonight.

Over 2000 Coast Guardsmen with 200 auxiliary life-saving vessels and 5000 Red Cross volunteers were standing by for the emergency.

First ground reports from the path of the storm came from the Weather Bureau at Turks Island, British West Indies, where an observer said the hurricane at the height of its fury was attended by winds of 190 miles per hour. All along, since it was first spotted, it has been steadily increasing.

Navy Planes Evacuated

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 14 (AP). Seventy-five Navy planes, evacuated from the hurricane-threatened South, landed today at the Martinsburg Municipal Airport.

$20,000 Worth of Jewels

Two Held as Fences for Boys Seized in 99 Cases of Theft

By Jean Reiff

Two men, who pawned or sold $20,000 worth of stolen jewelry in the last year as fences for a gang of 16 youths were charged at the First Precinct police station yesterday with 24 counts each of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Booked as Stanley Koldpack, 24, of 460 H st. nw., and Sidney T. Daniels, 21, of Berwyn, Md., the men also will be charged with 24 counts each of receiving stolen property, police said.

With the arrest of the 16 juveniles, police closed 99 cases of housebreaking, grand larceny, petit larceny and yoke robbery. The boys, ranging from 13 to 17 years of age, have been released in the custody of their parents for appearance in Juvenile Court.

The arrests were made by Precinct Detectives Donald Weber, Ralph M. Shoemaker and William Sparshott and Pvt. Bryan M. Dorsey, who followed a lead from the pawn inspector's office on a stolen gun.

Koldpack and Daniels began operations, they said yesterday, when several boys, who hung around a street corner near Koldpack's residence, tried to sell them a stolen watch. The boys could not pawn their loot because of their age, and the men agreed to help them out, they said.

During one trip alone to Baltimore, Koldpack and Daniels got $500 between them for valuables. They gave each of the 16 boys $10 apiece and kept the rest of the money, the men admitted yesterday.

Police said they were making a double profit by selling their pawn

Ford Lays Off 50,000 Men, Slaps Unions

Comeback of Nation Hindered by Labor Groups, Statement Of Company Insists

Detroit, Sept. 14 (AP).—Fifty thousand men were laid off by the Ford Motor Co. today, with strikes given as the cause, and more strikes were threatened to enforce industry-wide wage increase demands of organized auto workers.

Ford announced its layoff late today, declaring all production would virtually cease.

Earlier, the CIO's United Automobile Workers Union had made public a postwar union program seeking a 30 per cent wage increase throughout the industry with strikes as the weapon to help get it.

Issues Statement

The Ford Company said in a statement:

"After several weeks operations in the face of crippling and unauthorized strikes against many of our suppliers, the Ford Motor Co. is being forced to halt virtually all of its production operations late today.

"We have considered all angles of the situation. We wanted to keep men at work. We had hoped that by this time we would be hiring more men. Instead we are telling 50,000 of our employes to stay off their jobs indefinitely.

"In 2½ months we have produced less automobiles than we could in three hours of normal production and the major reason is that these continued outbreaks by irresponsible labor groups are impeding the regular progress of reconversion."

The Ford Co.'s action came as a climax to weeks-long labor strife in the Detroit area. Today's Ford layoffs brought to approximately 90,000 the number of idle auto industry workers here and in neighboring Windsor, Ontario, where a Ford strike was in its third day.

100,000 Had Jobs

Total Ford employment prior to the layoff was 109,000.

"It is time the country as a whole recognizes the seriousness of the situation," Ford said. "There can be no return to peacetime production so long as this condition exists. Every day without a full day's work delays the industrial comeback of the Nation. . . .

"We don't know when we can reopen our plants.

"It's difficult to admit that a company like Ford must be closed because labor insists on selfish politics when everyone's economic future is at stake.

"But it's true."

The Ford layoffs were announced as the international executive board of the CIO's United Automobile Workers was conducting a "trial" of officers of Detroit Local 174 which has carried on a strike for more than three

10 Assigned To Probe Pearl Harbor

Committee Headed By Barkley to Meet For Organization And Election Tuesday

A congressional committee of 10, which will be headed by Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, was named yesterday to investigate the Pearl Harbor disaster.

The other members:

From the Senate—George of Georgia and Lucas of Illinois, Democrats, and Ferguson of Michigan and Brewster of Maine, Republicans.

From the House—Cooper of Tennessee, Clark of North Carolina and Murphy of Pennsylvania, Democrats, and Keefe of Wisconsin and Gearhart of California, Republicans.

Will Organize Tuesday

The group will meet Tuesday to organize. Barkley's election as chairman then is a foregone conclusion.

It was he who introduced the resolution for an inquiry into all circumstances of the Japanese attack which knocked out eight American battleships and plunged this country into war.

By precedent, Cooper will be named vice chairman.

With these details attended to, the big immediate question for the committee will be the selection of a general counsel. The counsel for any congressional investigatory committee plays a big hand in the direction the inquiry takes.

Hughes Proposed as Counsel

Thus far only one name has been publicly proposed for the post. House Minority Leader Martin of Massachusetts suggested Charles Evans Hughes, retired Chief Justice of the United States.

There is a possibility that Senator George may decline to serve on the committee. He told reporters he was consulted only 10 minutes before Senate President McKellar (D., Tenn.) announced his appointment. George is chairman of the Finance Committee, which is busy with the jobless pay bill and other measures.

Jane Froman Aboard as More Yanks Head Home

Southampton, Sept. 14 (AP). — Singer Jane Froman, still on crutches, boarded the SS Queen Elizabeth today with 15,000 other Americans en route home.

Aboard the liner were the 271st and 272d Regiments of the 69th Divison, 191 nurses of the 62d and 65th General Hospital Detachments, Wacs, American civilians and a small number of delegations from British ministries.

Miss Froman was injured in February, 1942 when a clipper crashed near Lisbon while she was en route to entertain United States troops in the British Isles. She has had 18 operations since and expects to discard the crutches in about a year.

Excuse Please

Premier Asks That U. S. Forget Pearl Harbor as Japs Reform

Plea Shows Lack Of Understanding, Acheson Declares

Expresses Belief In the Emergence of Peace-Loving Country

By the Associated Press

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson said yesterday the suggestion of the Japanese Premier, Higashi-Kuni, to Americans "to forget Pearl Harbor" and "bury hate" shows failure of the Japanese to understand either themselves or Americans.

The Premier made his comment in replying to questions submitted to him by the Associated Press.

Members of Congress did not echo the Premier's plea.

"Nothing could show more clearly than this statement the failure of the Japanese to understand the nature of their own conduct or the mind of the American people," Acheson said.

"Pearl Harbor is not a symbol of hate for Japan, but a symbol of Japanese perfidy," he said.

"We are determined that there shall be no opportunity for such perfidy again.

"As Secretary Byrnes has said of the Japanese government, 'We shall judge that government by its deeds, not by its words.'"

Acheson submitted his statement in writing after being requested to comment on the replies of Nigashi-Kuni to 10 questions submitted in a letter by Russell Brines, Associated Press correspondent in Tokyo.

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (AP).—Premier Prince Higashi-Kuni, member of Japan's royal family, today asked America to "forget Pearl Harbor" while Nippon limps "step by step" into the circle of democratic nations.

The prince, in an exclusive statement to the Associated Press, declared his belief "that the new Japan which will emerge will be shorn of militarism and will be as peace-loving as the United States."

Higashi-Kuni pictured a long and difficult period of internal readjustment before the emergence of "a completely new and peaceful" Japan of "high moral principles and culture."

Solicited Criticisms

The prince, cousin to Emperor Hirohito and the first member of the imperial household ever to hold the premiership, recently solicited letters of criticism and suggestion from the people. It was an unprecedented request. The Associated Press sent him nine questions, and in 24 hours received a nine-page reply.

"People of America, won't you forget Pearl Harbor?" he asked. "We Japanese people will forget the picture of devastation wrought by the atomic bomb and will start

Marshall Plea Fails to Calm Release Critics

Charge That Army Is Hoarding Doctors Read to Senators

By Mary Spargo.

The Senate resounded yesterday with criticism of the Army and Navy's demobilization programs, despite a personal appeal to every member of Congress from Gen. George C. Marshall for support of the War Department's policy.

Veteran Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) urged the Senate committees to "stay on the necks of the Army and Navy" until "the War Department and the Navy Department get together and adopt a program intended to get persons out of the Army and Navy and not to keep them in."

Hoey Launches Attack

The Senate attack was launched by Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.), who read a letter from eight captains and a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps charging the Army with hoarding physicians.

Asserting that the average doctor in Army hospitals worked only two hours a day, the group charged the Army with having prepared "artful defenses" against any attack.

"In most cases," Connally told the Senate, "married men with families and men who have seen combat service overseas ought to be released."

Sarcastically he commented:

"I do not notice that there is any stoppage in the action of the War Department in promoting lieutenant generals and major generals. A large list of nominations come up here quite often.

Talk Not Enough

Something more than talk on the part of Congress will be required, Connally warned, if demobilization is to be speeded.

"I am of the opinion," he declared, "that we shall have to do more than say, 'Good morning, General, come in. We are delighted to see you. We wish to congratulate you on your fine service at that desk down at the War Department where you have been since Pearl Harbor.'

"We must do something to make the Army and Navy act with some promptness."

General Marshall yesterday sent each member of Congress a four-page booklet giving Army reasons why discharges are not so rapid as home folks expected. He offered to supply as many as Congressmen want for their constituents.

In a covering letter, Marshall declared that the maintenance of peace requires that "effective occupation forces be maintained both in Europe and the Japanese Em-

Army to Free 13,000 Doctors By January 1

Lower Point Score Also to Speed Nurse And Dentist Release

By George Connery

The War Department yesterday put into operation a new demobilization plan that for the first time lets all medical officers know just how they stand, and pledges release of 13,000 doctors, 23,000 nurses and 3500 dentists by the first of the year.

By July, 1946, the schedule calls for discharge of 30,000 doctors, 10,000 dentists and 40,000 nurses.

Officers are required to be in the separation pipelines within 60 days after they qualify for discharge, and special air and ship priorities are being used to return large numbers of overseas doctors, dentists and nurses.

Within 5000 of Peak

This demobilization program that means business gets under way with Medical, Dental and Nurse Corps staffed at virtually the same totals as on VE-Day, four months ago. The figures on September 10, latest date available, showed 45,000 doctors and 14,620 dentists still in the Army. They were described as "within 5000" of the peak.

Reduction will be brought about by a combination of lower point scores, age, dependents and length of service. With the exception of five categories of specialists, Medical Department officers will get out on this basis:

Medical and dental officers: 80 points, or 48 years, or active service since before Pearl Harbor.

Nurses—35 points, over 35 years, married, have dependents under 14.

Physical therapists and hospital dietiticans—40 points, 40 years, married, have dependents under 14.

Veterinary officers—80 points, 42 years, or joined service prior to January 1, 1941.

Medical administrative and sanitary corps officers—70 points, 42 years, in service since before Pearl Harbor.

As of September 2

Points are computed as of September 2, and on the same basis as for enlisted men.

The new program offers no guarantee of discharge to the Army's 4000 eye, ear, nose and throat specialists, plastic surgeons, orthopedic surgeons, neuropsychiatrists or laboratory technicians. However, it is anticipated that only 200 of these who might otherwise be released will be kept in for military necessity. If qualified by points, even these must be let out by December 15, unless they consent to remain in service longer.

14 Top Aides Take Over as '4 Horsemen' Are Unseated

13 Branch Offices Set Up in Nation; All Appointees On 'Acting' Basis

By Sam Stavisky
Post Veterans Editor

Sweeping reorganization and decentralization of Veterans' Administration was announced yesterday by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, administrator of veterans' affairs.

Three outstanding changes were disclosed:

1. Control of Veterans' Administration operations was distributed among 14 top assistants. Heretofore, under the two-decade administration of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, control was in the hands of the so-called "Four Horsemen," all deputy administrators.

2. All Veterans' Administration installations throughout the country will be placed under supervision of 13 branch offices. Currently, 50-odd regional offices and 100-odd hospitals are run directly from the Washington central office.

3. The lay chief of medical services was replaced by a two-star Army surgeon. For the first time the medical branch of Veterans' Administration was raised to an independent status.

Four Horsemen Retained

Although General Bradley broke up the dominating power of the "Four Horsemen," he retained all in key positions. The shakeup, though drastic, left old-time appointees in 10 of the top posts.

Two generals and two colonels who had served with General Bradley when he commanded the Twelfth Army Group in Europe were assigned to the other four ranking positions, each a vital control spot.

Bradley declared that all appointees, civilian and military, were taking over in an "acting" capacity, indicating that none of the appointments was permanent.

He stressed the "acting qualification in naming the military aides. By law, military personnel attached to Veterans' Administration must retire from the armed forces within six months after the official end of the war.

Announcement of the reorganization, made before a press conference, came exactly one month after Bradley had taken the oath of office. The streamlined central office setup will function along "military lines," he said.

New VA Chiefs

Executive assistant—Col. Eldon L. Bailey, former General Staff secretary at headquarters, Twelfth Army Group. Bailey, with more than 20 years' experience in Veterans' Administration operations, was chief of the death claims section before entering the Army three years ago. He will serve as a "chief of staff" to Bradley, and coordinate the activities of the other top assistants.

Born in Somerset, Pa., Colonel Bailey came to Washington at the age of 10, was graduated from Eastern High, enlisted in the First World War at the age of 15, went to work for the old Veterans' Bureau in 1919. He is a graduate of National University Law School.

Director of Organization, Coordination and Planning—Brig. Gen. Henry B. Lewis, former deputy chief of staff, Twelfth Army Group, who joined General Bradley's personal VA staff last month as chief administrative aide.

Served as Personal Aide

Assistant administrator for medicine and surgery—Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, former chief surgeon of the European theater, who has been serving as personal aide on medical affairs to General Bradley. He will now serve as "surgeon general."

Under the old system, the director of medical and hospital service, served under a layman who was the assistant administrator in charge of medical and domiciliary care, construction and supplies.

This change virually sets up an autonomous medical branch for VA, as requested in bills before both branches of Congress, and as urged by Elder Statesman Bernard

Navy to Give Back Unused 17 Billions

For War Criminals

Jap Gunboat Crew Sifted At Shanghai

Shanghai, Sept. 14, (U.P.).—The U. S. minesweeper YMS 49—first American ship to enter Shanghai harbor since 1941—today brought in the captured Japanese gunboat Ataki which escaped September 9, shortly after the Japanese signed the formal surrender for China in Nanking.

The Ataki was captured at sea by an American cruiser which sent a boarding party aboard to arrest the crew of 70. She turned ship and crew over to the minesweeper which brought it into the Whangpoo River. The crew is being sifted for war criminals.

One Japanese was found with a cigarette bearing the Emperor's seal—contributing to the theory that there might be important war criminals among the 70 men disguising themselves as ordinary sailors. Their personal belongings appeared far too rich for ordinary naval personnel. One even had a bottle of Johnny Walker Black Label Scotch.

Congress Told by Truman to Reclaim Appropriated Funds

By James E. Chinn

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to take back nearly 17 billion dollars it appropriated for the Navy when the Pacific war was in a furious stage and the atomic bomb was still in the laboratory.

The total cut recommended was made up of $11,518,301,253 in current appropriations and contract authorizations, and $5,306,252,674 of unused balances from previous years.

The drastic cutback, the President indicated, is only the first step toward placing the Navy on a peacetime basis, for he said he would ask for other adjustments in appropriations later, and suggested that Congress review all existing authorizations for construction of Naval vessels.

Parley at White House

Mr. Truman's unexpected recommendations closely followed a White House conference with top Navy officials, House and Senate members who deal with Navy legislation, and Budget Director Harold D. Smith.

He is reported to have told the group that the Navy will have to take its chances with other departments in the postwar budget. He also was said to have urged Senate Naval Affairs Committee Chairman David I. Walsh (D., Mass.), to get under way with hearings on a bill to determine the peacetime size of the fleet.

House Naval Affairs Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), who also participated in the conference, took the cue and announced after returning to the Capitol that his committee would start hearings on the measure next week.

May Keep Most Ships

He and Walsh are cosponsors of the bill. It is their belief that most of the wartime Navy of 1079 fighting ships be kept afloat—one third active, one third partly manned in reserve, and the rest laid up.

Involved in the $11,518,301,253 cutback in current appropriations are $3,212,442,131 of contract authorizations and the following major appropriations:

1. Savings because of demobilization in enlisted personnel from 3,300,000 at a rate of approximately 250,000 a month.

2. Cutbacks in ship construction which permitted withdrawal of $1,047,366,607.

3. Maintenance and operation of ships and Navy yards, including fuel, $1,373,183,000.

4. Aviation program reduction $1,404,300,000.

5. Ordnance program curtailment, $2,550,451,000.

More Adjustments Likely

"In making these recommendations for reductions," the President told Congress, "consideration has been given to the tremendous problem of demobilization and the yet undetermined requirements for a peacetime Navy.

"As indicated in my letter of September 5, 1945, I plan a continuing review of naval appropriations with the view to recommending further adjustments as conditions warrant."

In addition to Budget Director Smith, Senator Walsh and Representative Vinson, the President conferred with Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary Artemus L. Gates and Vice Admiral Louis I. Denfield, chief of Navy personnel.

educate the Japanese people," many of whom never heard of beheadings of Allied airmen, Bataan's "Death March," tortures, beatings or cannabalism among their own soldiers in New Guinea.

The Japanese government, meanwhile, notified MacArthur that it was ready to turn over most of those on his "wanted" list who may later face courts martial as war guilty.

Whether these included Cabinet Secretary Taketora Ogata, who enjoys ministerial rank, was not known. MacArthur has ordered him taken into custody.

Koizumi Kills Self

But one it could not turn over was Lieut. Gen. Chikanito Moizumi, minister of welfare in former Premier Hideki Tojo's "Pearl Harbor" cabinet.

The former surgeon general of the Japanese army committed hara kiri Thursday night in his home in a northwest Tokyo district.

Reuters reported that another on MacArthur's list, Kininimo Hashida, Tojo's former minister of education, took poison and was seriously ill.)

Gen. Teiichi Yosnimoto—not on MacArthur's list—also committed hara kiri. He had been commander of the northeast army district on the main home island of Monshu.

Tojo, who botched his own attempt at suicide with a bullet that missed his heart, continued to show improvement in an Army hospital.

Another topflight militarist, Admiral Shigetaro Snipada, Tojo's old navy minister, was in United States Army hands. He was described as a model prisoner and assured his captors he did not have hara kiri in mind.

Korean Governor Removed

MacArthur also acted to remove a sore spot in Korea. A dispatch from that nation's capital said he had removed the Japanese Gov. Gen. Hoboyuki Abe, a former premier, and his director of Korean police.

The functions of these two officials, whose temporary retention brought protests and demonstrations in Korea, were taken over by the United States Army of occupation.

The occupation of Japan was spreading smoothly, and Eichelberger estimated that possibly 100,000 of the 400,000-man occupation army now were ashore.

The size of the Army was reduced somewhat by the cancelation of orders for some railroad troops and engineers because Japanese installations were in better shape than expected. Other orders for specialized units also may be canceled.

Maj. Gen. Oscar W. Griswold set up his Fourteenth Corps Headquarters in the railway city of Sendai, 100 miles north of Tokyo, and a full division poured in by train today.

Occupation to Start September 27

Maj. Gen. Charles Ryder's Ninth Corps will begin the occupation of Hokkaido September 27, setting up headquarters at Sopporo, second largest city on that northern home island.

Navy medical officers warned that American forces scheduled to move into the northern tip of Honshu were heading for a pest hole. They found appalling conditions of filth ashore, only one doctor in the entire district, and such contagions as typhus, typhoid, smallpox, spinal meningitis and tuberculosis.

They were considering placing two cities out of bounds, Tanaru and Ominato, both northern ports. The latter had been marked for occupation by American troops October 8.

Both lie near the Ominato naval base, now under the control of the U. S. North Pacific Fleet.

pire, in addition to garrisons needed for our overseas bases."

Defends Point System

In defense of the point system he said that "Fairness has demanded that men be selected on the basis of their individual service for return to this country and discharge."

Senator Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) yesterday introduced a measure to permit one-year enlistments in the Army and Navy. Revercomb said he believed that one-year enlistments would suply all the volunteers needed for the armies of occupation. The War Department has repeatedly asserted that voluntary enlistments will not fill the need for men for the armies of occupation. Under Revercomb's bill men reenlisting would receive mustering-out pay and would get furlough travel allowances and all the benefits of the GI Bill of Rights.

May Bill to Come Up Monday

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) told newsmen yesterday that the measure introduced by Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) of the House Military Affairs Committee designed to encourage voluntary enlistments will come up for action Monday.

Rayburn said the bill would be subject to amendments from the floor. Many members of Congress believe a major fight will be launched to require the immediate discharge of certain categories of men.

A fight to halt the drafting of more 18-year-olds may be precipitated at the same time.

House Group Told District Needs Stronger Venereal Laws

DR. GEORGE C. RUHLAND

Testifies before the health subcommittee of the House District Committee

By John F. Gerrity

Health Officer George C. Ruhland and other witnesses yesterday told the House District Committee that a stronger law was needed to control the spread of venereal disease in Washington.

The hearing also brought out sharp differences between witnesses on the extent venereal disease menaces Washington.

Ruhland Cites Decrease

Dr. Ruhland said there had been a decline in the number of venereal disease cases in Washington. He discounted Public Health Service and Army and Navy statements predicting an increase in the venereal disease rate with returning servicemen.

Ruhland's statement was contradicted by Dr. H. H. Hazen, special consultant to the Public Health Service, who said Ruhland's estimates were "inaccurate." Dr. Hazen added that "on the contrary, Washington faces a small epidemic in venereal disease."

Dr. Ruhland admitted that "there is room for improvement in our control of the venereal disease spread."

Committee members, headed by John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), agreed following the session, that new legislation for the District was required.

Seek to "Plug Holes"

At the outset, Representative Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.) told both the committee members and the witnesses that they "had been called to take definite, affirmative actions to do the job."

Randolph also said that the purpose of the inquiry was to plug any holes in existing laws which might adversely affect the Health Department's efforts to combat the social disease.

Dr. Ruhland, first witness to testify, claimed that the department had made "reasonable progress" in fighting the disease.

The health officer admitted that the present rules for disease control were "far from infallible." He said that he delayed drafting new rules to use a report of the American Public Health Society for guidance. The report was published January 1 of this year.

Says Per Cent is Low

Ruhland challenged earlier claims that venereal disease would increase in the District with the release of servicemen. He said, that at best, only 1 in ever 1000 discharged men would have incubation stage infections. Approximately 78,000 Washington men entered the service.

Other highpoints in Ruhland's testimony were:

1. The District spends 21 cents per capita on its program each year. The national average is 11 cents, he said.

2. In 1935, 34 clinics were held here weekly. Today 85 clinics are held each week, he said.

3. Since 1933, there has been a progressive reduction in congenital syphilis and deaths resulting from syphilis.

4. In order to handle the problem of minors it would be good to have laws to enforce treatment and isolation.

5. Disease spread in the Negro population is "a menace, but we are developing our clinical work."

Serious Problem

When Representative McMillan questioned Ruhland as to what he would do if the Public Health Service discontinued its Rapid Treatment Center. The health officer answered that "it would be a grave question which we would have to face."

Dr. John R. Heller, assistant surgeon general in charge of venereal disease, stated that Washington's work in venereal disease was "good."

He said that while Washington's record in the treatment of early latent syphilis cases was as good as the Nation's average, the city lagged in treating primary and secondary syphilis.

Dr. Heller cited comparable figures to show how Washington stacked up against other States in the country.

"Not Accurate Picture"

At this point Representative Randolph interrupted to point out that Heller's statistics were for States, including rural districts, and that they did not present an accurate picture.

"In order to get an idea of what's going on in Washington you will have to us similar cities for your comparisons—not States," the Congressman insisted.

Dr. Hazen testifying on existing laws, flatly declared:

"We did not like the act from the day it was passed. There are some features in it which are extremely bad."

Dr. Hazen went on to say that Washington needs new facilities. Dr. Benjamin Chinn, acting director of the Health Department's venereal disease section, explained:

Need More Facilities

"While our facilities today may be adequate, if the number of patients increases we will need more."

Chinn said that the District could use more investigators. He pointed out that with each year's increase in appropriations it had been possible to treat more patients.

Dr. Joseph S. Wall, representing the District Medical Society, refuted the charge made earlier by Dr. Ruhland and Commissioner Mason that Washington doctors had failed to report venereal cases they treated.

He said that the doctors had reported faithfully, but "even if they had not, it would make little difference. The reporting cards supplied by the Health Department could be returned anonymously answered—which would do little good," he said.

The hearing will resume Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

STATE

called Nigashi-Kun's suggestion the "appeal of the head of the military of a defeated nation," adding:

"This country is not going to forget Pearl Harbor in the sense that it will let itself be caught like that again—I hope."

Senator Gerry (D., R. I.) remarked: "We won't forget Pearl Harbor. And Japan has a long way to go to convince us that she is a peace-loving nation."

Senator Cordon (D., Oreg.) said he did not believe this country would forget Pearl Harbor, and "I certainly hope that Japan remembers the atomic bomb."

From Senator Ferguson (D., Mich.), just appointed to the committee to investigate Pearl Harbor, came the jesting comment that Higashi Kuni "could not have picked a worse day" for his plea.

"We all hope Japan will be peace loving, but she will have to prove it," he added.

Pony Show Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—Twenty-five classes, including a lead rein pony class for children under 7, have been announced for the Mary Helen Riding Academy's Horse Show, which will be held Sunday under the sponsorship of the Annapolis Kiwanis Club.

stipulates that doctors listed in the five scarce categories may not be held in the Army against their wishes if they entered service prior to January 1, 1941.

Further Liberalizing Expected

It is expected that not later than the first of the year separation provisions will be further liberalized.

In addition to doctors and dentists, the Medical Department rolls carried the following on September 10: 2000 veterinary officers, 2000 sanitary, 18,700 in the administrative corps, 1500 dietitians and 52,000 nurses.

The Army's over-all point system for enlisted men, with 80 as the critical score, governs demobilization of the Medical Department's half million noncommissioned men and women.

Gen. Kilpatrick Asks For Inactive Status

By the Associated Press

Brig. Gen. John R. Kilpatrick, commander of the Hampton Roads Port of Embarkation, has requested that he be placed on inactive status, the War Department said yesterday.

Action on his request has not yet been taken. He has commanded the port since 1942 when he was called to active duty.

PREMIER

entirely anew as a peace-loving nation.

"America has won and Japan has lost. The war is ended. Let us now bury hate. This has been my policy since organization of the present cabinet."

Nigashi Muni was summoned by the Emperor to organize his cabinet a few hours after Hirohito broadcast the imperial prescript announcing Japan's capitulation and acceptance of the Allied Potsdam declaration.

Lists Major Problems

The premier listed these major problems needing immediate solution:

"First: How to carry out faithfully the provisions of the Potsdam declaration in an orderly and systematic fashion while maintaining general order and not throwing the country into confusion.

"Second: Food, clothing and shelter for the people.

"Third: Unemployment which will total an estimated 15 million persons.

The "attitude" of the American army of occupation is "really admirable" and "very commendable," the premier said, observing that he thought "strict observance of military discipline is becoming to a victorious army."

"Freed from the strongarm leadership of the militarist," said the prince, whose public life has heretofore been in uniform, the Japanese "will once more regain their original peaceful intentions."

Other Points Emphasized

Other points emphasized in the premier's letter were as follows:

"We intend to build a completely new and peaceful Japan; we intend to build a country of high moral principles and culture. I think it will require years for us to complete the task.

"All our internal inconsistencies wil be brougt to light as a result of Japan's defeat. The conflict between the old and the new may take the form of a struggle among political parties or of strikes, but I do not think such conflicts should be avoided.

"It is my firm belief that a new Japan, progressive and just, will be born as the result of these conflicts."

Steps wil be taken "as soon as possible in order to insure freedom of speech. But, the people have been subjected so long to oppression of free expression that I think it will take some time for the entire nation to practice freedom of speech, and then slowly, step by step.

"We are considering steps to abolish laws that might in any way hinder freedom of speech and on the other hand deal severely with those who may use force against freedom of expression, so that peace-loving elements may gather enough strength.

Expects Flow of U. S. Capital

"We are looking forward to a continuous flow of American capital an dtechnique.

"Real friendship cannot be created unless the people of the United States and Japan can come together and be friends. Diplomacy should not be left entirely to the diplomats. There must be direct intercourse between the peoples concerned."

Toyohiko Kagawa, noted Japanese Christian leader, has been asked by the Premier to extend help to "raise moral standards, do away with hatreds and establish friendly relations with the United States and other countries."

Hagash Kuni said he was depending upon the "power of religion" to help Japan. He declared that under the imperial throne "democracy in its true sense, I believe, will be realized in all phases of political, economic and social life under American's sagacious guidance."

Are Completely Exhausted

"I hope the people of the Allied powers extend a helping hand to the Japanese people, who now are completely exhausted," he said.

The prince said he personally believed the Superfortress raids on Japan called the turning point of the war, and he attributed Nippin's defeat to the following causes:

"The first was because morality has lost its hold in Japan. We can say one reason for our tragedy was that no great statesman appeared in Japan.

"We can also count as one reason lack of courage on the part of the Japanese people to defend justice, so they were unable to correct the mistaken guidance of militarists and bureaucrats. Then, also, our army leaders miscaloulated the actual strength of the United States.

"But the question boils down to this: Looking at it from all angles, Japan fought so she could not but lose and America fought so she could not but win."

STRIKES

weeks at the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Company.

This strike, which the UAM-CIO top leadership refused to sanction, was followed last week by the layoff of more than 30,000 Ford workers. Later, however, the Ford Company, which depended for certain supplies on Kelsey-Hayes, found other sources and returned most of the men to work.

Trial Called

A trial of the Local 174 leaders was called this afternoon when a deadline set by the UAM-CIO's board for the return of 4500 strikers passed without a resumption of work.

Idleness in current strikes includes 10,000 in Windsor at the Ford Motor Co. of Canada; 6500 at Hudson Motor Car Co., and 3100 at Murray Corp. of America. Several other strikes have from 90 to 900 idle each.

The CIO's United Auto Workers are involved in most instances.

JOBS

said that a uniform period of 26 weeks of payment is the only fair way to treat the unemployed. Some lawmakers have contended the measure might encourage laid-off workers to remain idle longer than they would normally.

VETERANS

M. Baruch, in his report on veterans last week.

Assistant Administrator for Records, Communication, and Contact—Col. Ralph T. Bronson, formerly attached to the adjutant General's Office, 12th Army Group. The work of this post is presently diffused among minor officials.

The "Four Horsemen:"

Assistant Administrator for Construction and Supplies—George E. Ijams, who also ran the medical service until yesterday.

Assistant Administrator for Claims—Major O. W. Clark, whose former position also included vocational rehabilitation.

Solicitor—Edward E. Odom, retaining his old post.

Ijams, Clark, and Odom, together with Adelbert D. Hiller, who was executive assistant to the administrator, were the key men under General Hines. The first three retain top status, but lose part of their powers to men who served under them in a subordinate position, and who are now raised to equal standing. Hiller moves over as executive assistant under General Hawley.

Assistant Administrators who get increased status:

Insurance—Harold Breining.

Vocational Training, Rehabilitation, and Education—R. V. Stirling.

Personnel—G. H. Sweet.

Finance—Maurice Collins.

Chairman, Central Board of Appeals—R. L. Jarnagin.

Director, Public Relations—Edward McK. Lewis.

These assistant administrators administrators are all officials of long service with Veterans Administration, and while they will continue the work they were doing under the ol daystem, they have been given more power to carry out the tasks created for their departments by the Second World War.

As General Bradley put it: Veterans' Administration was organized well enough to handle the load of World War I, some five million veterans, but not adequately for the new total load of 20 million veterans.

One Yet to Be Named

A fourteenth assistant administrator, yet to be named, will be placed in charge of special services. The latter category will include such activities as post exchanges, chapels and welfare work. Bradley said that under the new program private concessionaires at hospitals and other VA facilities will give way to VA post exchanges, which would utilize all profits for the benefit of the veterans.

The 13 branch offices will be established just as quickly as personnel can be trained to take over, and space can be found for the offices, Bradley said. The branches will take immediate supervision of hospitals, domiciliaries, regional and subregional offices in their area. Later, the branches will take over insurance and dependents' claims now handled by the central office.

Oakland, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—Efforts to have a veterans' hospital built in Garrett County were intensified at a meeting of the Mayor and City Council this week when they asked City Attorney E. Ray Jones to make the formal request to the Veterans' Administration. The county commissioners prepared a similar resolution last week.

Reich Leader Denies 'Total' War Guilt

Berlin, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Otto Grotewohl, head of the Social-Democrat Party, today became the first responsible German political leader to reject openly the theory of "total" German war guilt, declaring that large sections of the working classes "inwardly" never bowed to Adolf Hitler.

In a three-hour speech in Berlin's Neuewelt auditorium before some 2500 party officers from all sections of Germany, Grotewohl said the organized German working class can "hold its head as high as those of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Italy and France."

"When it's either 'hunger and die' or 'work and shut up,' a revolution by the working classes is impossible," he said.

"The German nation can be declared guilty—that's the right of the victors. But large sections of the working class can never be declared guilty. Inwardly they never bowed to Hitler. They carried on the fight."

The crowd gave Grotewohl a wild ovation when he called for collaboration between the Social-Democrats and the Communist Party in Germany, demanding that they work together to form a "united working class front" in the future democratic Germany.

Grotewohl revealed that the fusion of the central committees of the two parties already had begun, but he warned workers of both parties that their collaboration must be sincere without any trace of a rift in the working classes which, he said, led the German Weimer republic to disaster after the first World War and provided an opening for the Nazis.

The Social-Democrats, one of the four Allied-approved parties in present-day Germany, was the strongest party in the Reich after World War I, when it had a strong left-wing element which split away from the main party and weakened it.

Ring Purchaser Held

When questioned by police, the men said they had about 18 watches and 22 rings in pawnshops in Maryland, seven watches and three rings in pawnshops in Virginia and 23 watches and six rings in second-hand stores in Washington.

About 75 per cent of the articles pawned or sold are recoverable, police said. Part of the valuables are already in the hands of police. One ring was recovered from Claude Foster, 35, of 448 H st. nw., who purchased it for $20 although it is valued at $750. Foster was arraigned on a charge of receiving stolen property and ordered held for the action of the grand jury.

Koldpack and Daniels are stepbrothers and have worked as painters and mechanics since they left eighth and seventh grades respectively. Koldpack was arrested in 1936 for housebreaking and was sent to National Training School for Boys for 16 months. Daniels said he was arrested in Maryland for auto theft several years ago.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

FEA Lay-Offs Under Way; 1400 to Go by Dec. 15

FEA: A big layoff is coming. Forty per cent of its 3500 employes here, or about 1400, will be furloughed by December 15. The first batch of separation notices went out yesterday. In a memo to each employe, Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T Crowley promises to try to get jobs for all employes to be laid off. Negotiations, he said, are already under way with other Federal agencies and private business firms to take people. The agency reports splendid success in getting jobs in private industry for people in its Requirements and Supply Branch. Crowley thanked his employes for sticking to their jobs and he gave them credit for helping to win the war. But he frankly states that "in this period of readjustment it is no longer possible to provide jobs for them all." Each employe will be given a copy of Civil Service's reduction in force regulations and Crowley promises they will be followed in spirit and letter.

KLUTTZ

FUTURE: Many FEA employes have speculated that a good part of the agency would be transferred to other Government bureaus. Crowley spikes this talk. He says it may be possible to transfer only one or two activities to other agencies. That's all. The food division is likely to be sent to Agriculture. Commerce wants to take over many FEA records and its trade promotion work and data. This transfer, it's said, would involve few people. Thought also is being given to preserving some of the functions of the enemy branch. The records of this unit have great value. Treasury's Procurement Division is slated to take over the job of buying supplies for United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation. It hasn't been decided when FEA will be abolished as an independent agency. The best guess is around January 1.

DIARY NOTES: In his final report on Reemployment and Retraining Administration, Gen. Frank T. Hines will recommend that RRA be continued as a policy-making agency. He's opposed to the rumored transfer of war manpower to it. The report also will make predictions on postwar employment . . . RRA and WMC are now slated for transfer to the Labor Department. The definite decision is reported to have been made . . . Labor also will get NLRB, War Labor Board, Unemployment Compensation, and some manpower activities of the War Production Board, Social Security still opposes the transfer of Unemployment Compensation . . . Agriculture has published a booklet for its supervisors on what to do with returning servicemen. The rights of servicemen are explained in detail and all questions are answered clearly.

STORY: A businessman some months ago decided to go into the manufacturing of what he considered was an essential war-supporting product. He came to Washington when he couldn't get any satisfaction from his local War Production Board office. He first appeared before the Materials and Products Division. The director of that division, Shaw Livermore, listened respectfully and turned him down. The manufacturer then appealed to the Program Adjustment Committee only to find that Livermore was also chairman. Livermore listened again and again he refused to allocate materials. The businessman then decided to appeal to the highest authority, the Central Requirements Committee, whose chairman was Lincoln Gordon. However, when he appeared the chairman was absent and the manufacturer again found himself appealing to Livermore, the senior member. As the manufacturer left the room, somewhat confused, he was heard to mutter "quoth the raven Livermore."

GPO: Public Printer A. E. Giegengack has aked the comptroller general to decide if it would be legal to pay his employes for the 30-minute lunch periods. The mechanical unions asked for the ruling and GPO may not make it effective even if it is declared legal. The unions want 8-hour pay for 7½ hours of work. Giegengack has offered his per diem employes a 5 per cent pay raise which would make 15 per cent over the past year. Ten per cent increases were ordered last year. The unions may appeal to the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing for higher wages. GPO is still working a minimum of 48 hours and many of its employes are on a 54-hour week. Giegengack, however, is making plans for a 5-day, 40-hour week to become effective when the work levels off.

MORE NOTES: A multibillion-dollar cut in War Department appropriations will be recommended next week to Congress by President Truman . . . Six of the 35 correspondence clerks in GAO's military and naval sections have been reallocated from Grade 4 to CAF-5. The remaining clerks say they do identical work and they want to be promoted, too . . . In the Government are 288 working mothers who have children in local day-care nurseries which are financed by Federal Works with Lanham Act funds. FWA has ordered this program stopped. Mothers are protesting.

Collins' Claim Of Stolen Poll Data Assailed

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—The statement of Stuart G. Christian, counsel for L. Preston Collins, that 'the very foundation on which we hope to base our case"—poll books—has been stolen "apparently by someone who thought they were doing Fenwick (Charles Fenwick of Arlington, who was high man in the race with Collins for Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor) a favor" brought vigorous protest from counsel for Fenwick.

George E. Allen, attorney for Fenwick, declared that Collins' attorneys could go to the judges and prove the vote as they did in Pound precinct. "The only advantage they have," he said, "is the publicity on the stolen poll books, not the law in this case."

Witness Won't Testify

Attorneys for Collins, who is contesting the vote in Wise County, where a huge majority for Fenwick gave him a 572 lead over Collins in the State, have contended that ballots are not valid unless they can be supported by an equal number of votes on the poll books.

James Garfield Buchanan, 61, of Coeburn, declined to testify at the hearing today in Richmond City Circuit Court, stating, "I don't want to make any further statement; I don't want to incriminate myself." He previously has replied to questioning from counsel for Collins by saying he had helped vote mail ballots the day before the primary.

Surprise to Clerk

Deputy Clerk Will Bond Lay of Wise County examined the county's ballots on the witness stand and testified, that 18 of the packages containing ballots, had been sealed with wax, 6 were sealed in another manner and 2 were tied with string.

He said he knew nothing of the reported theft of the books from the vault in the clerk's office, where he said he placed them following the canvass August 9, two days after the primary. He further testified that he knew nothing of the loss of the poll books until told of it by Clerk J. A. Gardner upon his return from a vacation August 13.

The case moved from the Richmond Circuit Court this afternoon to Norton, where further depositions will be taken beginning Wednesday at 10 a. m.

Attorneys for Collins said they expect to complete their case by the end of next week, while counsel for Fenwick stated they expect to be ready for argument soon after October 1. They said they would have to take more depositions in Lunenburg, Cumberland and Prince Edward Counties.

County 4-H Fair To Open Today At Purcellville

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 14 (Spl.).—Loudoun County 4-H boys and girls are putting the finishing touches to their exhibits today in preparation for the tenth annual fair, which opens at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Purcellville show grounds.

The youngsters are busy getting their livestock in perfect condition, washing and grooming the animals. A parade of the exhibitors and their livestock at 1:30 p. m. is one of the features of the event.

Farmers, their wives and children, as well as other residents, are planning to attend to see the displays of farm crops, canned fruits and vegetables, dairy and beef cattle, the handiwork of the youth, the flower show and many other projects of the 4-H Clubs. A pony show in the afternoon is another big attraction. Indications point to the 10 pony classes being well filled.

DDT Effect on Fish To Be Tested in Berkeley County

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 14 (Spl.).—An experiment to determine the effect of DDT on fish in warm water streams will be conducted by the U. S. Department of the Interior in a stretch of Back Creek in this county, the State Conservation Commission reported today.

Eugene Surber, of the Federal hatchery at Leestown, identified the stretch of water to be used in the experiment as a mile and a half stretch of water from the Winchester line to Glengary.

The experiment, Surber said, will be not only to test the effect of DDT on warm water bass streams but to see if control of insect pests, such as gypsy moth and brown field moth, can be effected. One pound of DDT to an acre will be distributed by airplane during the experiment, he said.

Va. Stage Lines Granted Two New Routes

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today granted two certificates of public convenience and necessity to Virginia Stage Lines and took application for a third under advisement.

Certificate was granted allowing transportation of passengers, baggage, mail and express from the intersection of U. S. Highway 29 and Virginia Highway 28 to the intersection of Virginia Highways 28 and 233, thence over Highway 28 through Calverton and return.

The same certificate also allows authorization from the intersection of Virginia Highways 28 and 17 to the intersection of No. 17 and 233 at Morrisville and over Highway 17 to Bealeton and return. The company will serve all points along both routes.

The stage lines also was given permission to operate between Danville and the Virginia-North Carolina State line over U. S. Highway No. 58 to the junction of U. S. 58 and Virginia 726 and over 726 and return, including all intermediate points.

The certificate specifies that no passengers will be handled whose origin is Danville and whose destination is the junction of U. S. 58 and Virginia 726, or the reverses, including passengers originating at and destined for points between Danville and the junction.

However, passengers who board buses in Danville and points between there and the junction of the two highways who are going to leave the bus at points on Highway 726 between its junction with U. S. 58 and the State line, or the reverse, may be transported.

The petition for a certificate to operate between Charlottesville and Orange over Virginia Highway 613 to its intersection with Highway 20, then over 20 and return, was taken under advisement because of insufficient notice.

Va. Retailers Oppose Plan For Sales Tax

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Asserting that a retail sales tax would impose an undue burden on the lower income group of purchasers, Walter N. Evans, counsel for the Retail Merchants Association of Virginia, today put the association on record before the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce tax hearing as being solidly opposed to such a tax.

Evans said that Virginia cities close to the borders of States not having a sales tax would suffer in competition with some nearby towns if the tax were imposed.

Dr. C. F. Marsh, research adviser to the Chamber's Committee on Taxation and Government, earlier expressed views of the committee holding in disfavor the sales tax. Dr. Robert H. Tucker, chairman of the tax committee, said, however, that the committee's report was "purely tentative" and "in preliminary form only."

Favors Tobacco Hike

It was stated at the hearing that taxes on tobacco have been favorable to all States which use them, because they are large revenue producers and are easily administered. "Therefore," Dr. Marsh said, "the committee looks on cigarette sales taxes as a good source of new revenue if new revenue is needed."

Opposition to this view was expressed by M. A. Hubbard of the State Department of Agriculture, who cited a survey made by the Federal Reserve Bank, which found that producers of flue-cured tobacco are in one of the lowest income groups in this area. Hubbard said recent increased taxes on tobacco products have been largely absorbed by the manufacturers, but that if new taxes were imposed they might have to be shifted to the consumer, with a resulting decrease in sales, or to the grower, who is already in poor economic condition.

State and local tax relations were also discussed.

A general agreement among industrial and manufacturing interests that Virginia's tax system should be streamlined has been brought out at the hearing begun yesterday.

Effective measures for accomplishing this were advocated by representatives of the State's "big business" at a hearing of the State chamber's committee on taxation and government held here yesterday.

Among changes suggested was the reduction of the present tax on intangibles, proponents asserting that the State could lose little or no revenue from such a change because a lower tax rate would bring out much intangible property not now on the tax rolls. A proposal also was made that the State simplify its income-tax returns and make the forms conform to those of the Federal Government.

Emphasizing the need for further study in the license-tax field, Dr. C. F. Marsh, research assistant to the committee, suggested that the system of State license taxes might be abolished, except for merchants, if some other source could be found to furnish the three million dollars in revenues derived by the State from this source.

A proposal that the State adopt a system of withholding taxes from State income met with some objection, a number of manufacturers contending that such a system would impose an undue burden on business.

At midnight eight bells will be struck on the Japanese bell presented to Commodore Perry by the regent of the Lew-Chew Islands.

The week of celebrations will end with the Navy-Penn State football game in Thompson Stadium October 13.

The demand will be made by petition, Bond said, predicting that 1000 taxpayers would sign.

In the meantime, Treasurer Foley said taxpayers would suffer no loss as a result of the $1997.76 shortage because it is fully covered by insurance. He also said in a statement that he was determined to do everything "humanly possible to prevent the recurrence of anything of this sort again."

The grand jury, while not returning any indictments, criticized the methods of auditing books, office practices and commented that there was "general mismanagement" of the department.

1600-Bed Leyte Hospital Built Under Jap Fire

Baltimore, Sept. 14 (AP). — How physicians of the Johns Hopkins unit on Leyte Island pitched in to build a great hospital despite occasional attacks by errant Japanese planes was told today by Lieut. Marion Fox, a Baltimore Army nurse.

Lieutenant Fox, recently returned from 40 months of overseas service, said the medical men labored with hammer and saw to aid the engineer battalion in building the 1600-bed hospital, twice the size of Baltimore's Johns Hopkins institution.

Native Filipinos, too, lent a hand, she recalled. Their specialty was the construction of rush side walls for the wards, and these "proved a blessing during heavy rainfall."

"Makeshfit" would be an understatement for the sprawling structure, but nevertheless its 24 wards and ample housing accommodations for nurses and doctors were on the comfortable side, Lieutenant Fox said.

Ammunition packing boxes, for instance, provided the principal material for the furniture but "despite this, some mighty comfortable benches and chairs and really workmanlike tables" were created, she said.

Filipino "construction aides" did not ask money but "preferred discarded American clothing as reward for their work."

When the Johns Hopkins unit arrived in Leyte, the hospital buildings were in the beginning stages, with roof poles tied together with jungle vines and the floors merely criss-crossed foundation timber, the nurse related.

Since January, 1945, the unit was established at Leyte, after service in Australia, and New Guinea, she said.

Emphasis On Health

Dr. Ruhland's proposed budget for next year reminds us that health is one field in which at least a small part of the energy released from the business of making war can be diverted to great advantage. The District health officer asks for an increase of 50 per cent in personnel, or a total of nearly 1000 new employes. Should private health services be correspondingly increased, many new jobs would be created and the health of the people would certainly be improved. This is work of the greatest importance and we hope that it will be given proper emphasis by the comprehensive survey which the Washington Metropolitan Health Council launched yesterday.

The last decade has been a period of striking gains, so far as health in Washington is concerned. Still there are areas of gross neglect in our public health service. Two years ago the D'Alesandro report centered attention upon many of the shameful conditions to be found in the Capital and recommended that "the budget of the Health Department be increased so that the amount spent for health will approximate the amount suggested by the American Public Health Association, namely $2 to $2.50 per capita." Similar requests had previously been made by the Health Department, but this year its appropriation still amounts to only $1.40 per capita.

No doubt there has been some excuse for continued laxity during the war years. Even when funds have been appropriated, it has been difficult to find personnel to fill the positions created. Now, however, the situation has been thrown into reverse. Congress is faced with the urgent problem of creating new job opportunities. Dr. Ruhland is taking proper advantage of this situation by pressing his demand for a greatly enlarged health budget. If the Commissioners, Budget Bureau and Congress should allow the funds he requests, Washington could take its place among the progressive cities that make health a primary concern.

In some instances we are inclined to think that the department may have underestimated its requirements. An increase of $10,000 has been asked for additional venereal disease investigators. Local authorities expressed the belief at yesterday's hearing on the V. D. problem that facilities and personnel are otherwise adequate. Considering the outlook for a grave increase in syphilis in the postwar period, many persons especially concerned with the spread of social diseases believe that this is a short-sighted view. But in general the department has certainly taken the lead in trying to widen the scope of public health services.

The effect is to put the Commissioners, the Budget Bureau and Congress on the spot. Those agencies slashed more than $400,000 from the proposed health budget this year. Like treatment of the present budget would project into peacetime the inexcusable policy of neglect that has prevailed in the past. Washington can attain a high degree of public health only if the powers that be are willing to appropriate the necessary funds. We are glad that Dr. Ruhland has had the courage to state the city's needs as he sees them in spite of the heavy increase in expenditures contemplated. Our policy-makers must now provide this budget or admit that they are skimping at the cost of human lives.

Wake Island Hero

The true story of Maj. James P. Devereux and his fellow-defenders of Wake Island turns out to have been quite heroic enough without benefit of any public relations embellishments. Overwhelmingly outnumbered, they fought off the Japanese invaders for 15 days, forcing them to pay a heavy toll for possession of the island. Major Devereux himself, it appears, was a great deal too busy leading his little force of marines and sailors to indulge in mock-heroics or theatrical last words. During the fight for Wake he was quoted as having sent out a radio message, "Send us more Japs." The plain fact of the matter is, as he was in understandable haste to make clear, that he never said anything of the sort.

Immediately upon his release the other day from a prison camp on Hokkaido, Major Devereux declared: "We did not send out such a message. We had all and more Japs than we could handle right then. There were just too many of them for us to hold off any longer." We wonder who presumed to put into the mouth of this modest officer a piece of bombast which proves to have been wholly alien to his character. The author of the phony phrase ought to be identified; in the line of lily-gilding it achieved a new nadir.

Major Devereux expressed himself in action—not in foolish words. Having fought to the end of his resources, he shared captivity with his men. And they were his first concern when liberation at last came. With the surrender of Japan, he assumed command of the prison camp and refused to leave it until all the prisoners under him could be removed. His conduct stands in no need whatever of dramatization.

Japanese Mistakes

From the testimony of Admiral Kanazawa and others it is now possible to see how considerably the Japanese contributed to their own defeat. Of course the biggest mistake, as the admiral said very frankly, "was in starting the war at all." By no means all the influential Japanese wanted a war with the United States. Prince Konoye, now vice premier, tried belatedly to save his country from going over the brink. Tojo, of course, led the war party, which derived its impetus from the fanaticism of army officers, Shintoist priests and secret societies. The contest of these parties continued almost until the eve of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

It was not a contest for popular support, as it might have been here or in Britain; it was a contest for ascendancy over the mind of the Emperor. When the war came Japanese of both parties obeyed the Emperor's commands as implicitly as they afterward obeyed his command to surrender. "It was the Emperor," said Kanazawa, "who told us to fight; it was the Emperor who told us to stop fighting. He is the one we obey." Had the Emperor, when the Americans were preparing to invade Japan, commanded resistance with the last drop of blood, he would doubtless have been just as implicitly obeyed.

The second great mistake of the Japanese, from a military standpoint, was in not invading Hawaii immediately after Pearl Harbor. Then, with virtually all American ships and planes destroyed, the islands could scarcely have been defended. And if Hawaii had fallen to the Japanese, the war would certainly have been longer, bloodier, costlier. We should have been obliged to retake Hawaii at any cost since it afforded the only possible base of far-Pacific operations.

The Japanese did not invade Hawaii when the opportunity was theirs, for the same reason the Germans did not invade Britain in the summer of 1940—it was not in the directive. Japanese strategists did not anticipate how thoroughly the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor would cripple American naval power in the Pacific, just as the German General Staff had not anticipated how easily and rapidly France would be crushed. According to Admiral Kanazawa, the notion of invading Hawaii had been considered and was rejected because the supply lines would be too long and too vulnerable. It was not until after their great disaster in the Coral Sea that the Japanese strategists could bring themselves to believe it would be easier and more advantageous to take Midway and Hawaii than Australia. But the decision was taken many months too late, and the result of it was their second great disaster in the Battle of Midway.

Another not inconsiderable factor in the Japanese defeat seems to have been the mutual jealousy of the Army and Navy leaders, their disagreement on strategic questions and the lack of fully coordinated efforts by land and sea forces. In many instances troopships were moved without escort and became an easy prey for American planes. Finally, there was the deep mutual distrust of the Japanese and their allies, the Germans. So little did the Germans in Tokyo know about the plans and preparations of the Japanese military leaders that they even feared for a time the Japanese might enter the war on the side of Great Britain.

The German and Japanese war plans seem not to have been in any way coordinated, though before the battles at El Alamein and the Crimea there was always the possibility of a junction of the Axis armies in the Middle East, and it gave the Allied strategists many a nightmare. On their part the Germans were niggardly about giving technological assistance to their allies. They sold a good many supposedly secret chemical formulas to the Japanese Military Mission in Berlin, but most of them were formulas the Germans themselves had discarded in favor of better ones.

Pulling Out

The Army and Navy Departments and the other Government agencies in control of seized private property are fast pulling out. Sixteen properties have recently been returned to their owners and other withdrawals are in immediate prospect. In a good many instances, the labor troubles giving rise to seizures are only in abeyance and fresh outbreaks are anticipated when private managements again assume charge.

A strike was called in a South Carolina textile plant immediately following its return, because the company refused to obey a WLB order on union security. Similar WLB orders have been disregarded by two oil companies that have been turned back to their owners by the Petroleum Administrator. Moreover, the CIO is said to be laying plans to call a strike against Montgomery Ward as soon as its seized properties are again in the hands of its intransigent management. The union is proceeding on the assumption that a showdown fight on maintenance of union membership and demands for wage increases is inevitable.

While the policy of dumping quiescent disputes into the laps of private managements at this time may be productive of trouble, the Government's sole warrant for taking over private plants lay in the need for furthering the war effort. With the war over, the case for prompt restitution is very strong, quite apart from the fact that Government agencies are eager to relinquish their responsibilities.

While interest has been concentrated upon the possible labor disturbances resulting from the Government's withdrawal from the scene, many less spectacular but extremely difficult problems will give rise to litigation for the indefinite future. In some cases operations may have been conducted by the Government at a loss or at less profit than the private managements think should have been earned. The Court of Claims will accordingly be called upon to settle a host of disputes growing out of Government temporary seizures in cases where seizure involved actual operation by the Government, not nominal control. Government lawyers will have their hands full defending claims for compensation or indemnity. These legal battles will no doubt outlast the public's recollection of the comic opera scenes enacted on the historic occasion when the head of Montgomery Ward was removed forcibly from his office.

Bolivian Case

Now that the war is over, the diplomatic effort in this continent will be devoted to the acceptance of the pledges of the Act of Chapultepec, which all the American republics have signed and ratified. The act can be made a living instrument only by a common effort to see that all the American nations live up to it. Accordingly we hail Ambassador Berle's statement at Rio that the Americas must make the pledge of freedom of information a reality. It is one of the pledges which made the Act of Chapultepec a new constitution for the Americas. At present, of course, the pledge is honored as much in the breach as in the observance. In United States eyes the chief delinquent is Argentina, but the fact is that enough freedom of information has been allowed in Buenos Aires, thanks to Ambassador Braden's historic embassy, to enable the correspondents stationed in the Argentine capital to keep the world apprised of what is happening within.

Next door to Argentina, however, the clamps are down. In Bolivia, where the Villaroel government was set up as an appendage to aggressive Argentina, real news is silenced, and comment on conditions worse than in Argentina could be made only at the risk of the correspondent's life. From time to time we have reported the facts of the reign of terror at La Paz. We trust that, in view of our obligations under the Act of Chapultepec, the State Department will urge upon the Pan American Union that the Bolivian problem should be ventilated. In the meantime the American news agencies, which have done valiant service in Buenos Aires, might also be reminded of Bolivia. Only Bolivian correspondents represent the news agencies at La Paz, and it would be human if they felt hampered in their work by the lenthening list of executions, exiles, and missing persons who have the temerity to question the works of the Villaroel government.

Discharge Speed-Up

Criticism of the Army's discharge system has in some cases been based on lack of understanding of the general principles on which discharges are based. Nevertheless, the "show me" attitude of Congress and the public has had most salutary consequences. We do not doubt that it has spurred the Army to speed up demobilization and review its own plans with the object of reducing legitimate causes of complaint to a minimum. Finally, open discussion will enable civilians and soldiers alike to realize that demobilization plans have to be executed in such fashion as not to interfere with long-range defense policies.

It would not be practicable in any event to release en masse the millions of men who are to be discharged within the coming months. The projected speed-up made possible by the setting up of additional separation centers should put men into civilian clothes at a sufficiently rapid rate to satisfy reasonable critics and allay suspicion that the Army is stalling.

Enlisted men not yet eligible for discharge, although no longer needed, and eligible men waiting their turn to be discharged, naturally rebel against their lot. Their impatience must often reach the explosive point, especially when they are detailed to cut grass with bayonets, as at Fort Belvoir. The answer to criticism from these men seems to be to find more intelligent ways of occupying the time of soldiers without real jobs until their turn at the discharge centers arrives. The decision to give 45-day furloughs to men not headed overseas and not usefully employed at the moment is excellent. For it will enable large numbers of soldiers to investigate employment openings well in advance of need, without feeling under compulsion to take hasty action. These lengthened furloughs, coupled with the promised speed-up of discharges, will mitigate the hardships of the waiting period and should go far toward propitiating critics of the Army.

HASTEN MY DREAM

Rome was too far, like a lonely road curving away from my heart
And further north was nearer
Where the bells ring loud like thunder clap
And death lies quiet under the tall grass.

Now I hear, it's London
Where the fog lifts after forever;
And soon after, home again, the lonely road,
the bright curving road leading to my heart.

Hurry, hurry now
Before the summer pigeons look elsewhere for crumbs beneath trees
More shady, more green;
Hurry, hurry now
Before the tan of my skin gives way to the paleness of my waiting.

Discharge Defects

Reader Opinion

I am in agreement with your editorial of September 8, entitled "Discharge Defects."

I am a pre-Pearl Harbor father. I have a son 13 years of age. I have two daughters age 3 and 1.

When America started calling pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, I patriotically volunteered for service in the Navy's Ship Repair Unit. After a wait of eight months on inactive duty, I was called to active duty on October 12, 1944.

Now, at the present time I have only 11 months of duty to my credit. I have only 32 points towards a discharge. I must wait for 22 more months to qualify for a discharge. I am 33 years of age.

This life is a horror to me. I have lived with my wife for 13 years of our 14 years of married life. Frankly, I love my wife and children very much. My home is away out in Salt Lake City, Utah. My wife must stay there, to send my son to school, and for many other reasons.

My wife is in need of an operation of long standing. The snow gets very deep, in the winter, back home. I am very bitter. My patriotism is being sorely tried. Just after I came in the Navy, they quit drafting men over 30 years of age. Through my great patriotism I have set myself down for great misery. I gave up $2 per hour to come into service.

Now the war is over, I want to go home. I am badly needed at home. My bitterness increases each hour. Ten years ago, I would have enjoyed this life; but not now. Can the Navy possibly give me an explanation for why I must continue to "kill time" back here while my family suffers?

Are they trying to make a Communist out of me? Can I continue to love this great country if I must stay away from those who love me, and need me so badly?

I hope and pray that soon I may be granted the privilege of going home to my troubled little family. Meanwhile my bitterness is being burned into my soul. My dear wife and son are becoming bitter. M. N.

More power and more space to Senator Pat McCarran and his proposal to discharge limited servicemen and provide one million civilians with jobs.

SERGT. JOHN V. MILLER.
Fort Myer, Va., Sept. 9.

I don't think any married man over 28, with more than two years of service, should be sent overseas now. If he has a family they need him; and if he hasn't it's time he started one! Those of us who decided to wait until the war was over before raising a family are certainly left holding the bag! It seems to me, and to others like us who are in the same boat, that the Army of Occupation should be made up of volunteers, and of youngsters 19 to 24 who want to go; and of those men under 28, drafted within the last year or two, who have not been overseas.

MRS. RUBY ZACK,

A thoroughgoing congressional investigation will do much to dispel the feeling found in many people that the Army is wasting manpower or that releases are being delayed to avoid flooding the labor market or to provide commands for officers. A full airing of the plans and timing of the return of the Army to a peace status is highly desirable to scotch these and other rumors and to form a basis for an intelligent understanding of the problem. DONALD MYRICK.

Washington, Sept. 9.

The plan to continue Selective Service legislation, as presented by President Truman, is the soundest proposal yet voiced on this controversial subject.

In the writer's opinion, the age of the draft should not be limited to the 18-25 age group. As long as the Army is retaining men over the age of 25, the serviceman is being discriminated against, unless the Selective Service board continue to summon men over 25 years for service to their country. In all fairness, the qualifications which retain a man in the armed forces should parallel those which govern his fellow citizen's induction.

SERVICEMAN'S WIFE.
Appleton, Wis., Sept. 5.

It isn't that we don't feel our share of responsibility in rebuilding this new world, but as soldiers we don't think that we can do our utmost by remaining in the Army, picking up cigarette butts and retaking basic training, after a year overseas including 287 days of actual combat. Now that this nightmarish conflict is over, we want our chance to take over our duties as husbands and fathers, and as men of this democracy of ours.

We can't imagine how public sentiment (for it was through public sentiment and for the people we fought) will allow us to remain in the service, rotting till we actually do become problems. Our answer to this is to keep drafting young men to refill our depleted ranks, and surely, with this new atomic bomb, a monstrous Army such as ours is obsolete.

As for our own immediate futures, our solution is to place us in separation centers near our homes, or, furlough us home until the Army sees fit to discharge us. SIXTY VETS.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Transatlantic Understanding

SHORTLY BEFORE he left for the London meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes sat down and added up the lump-sum amounts that foreign governments are hoping to obtain during the coming year from the United States.

The total was 15 billion dollars. At the same time that he told of this little venture in addition, he recounted something that happened to him a day or two before.

While he was going up on the elevator in his hotel, someone tapped him on the shoulder. It was the Ambassador of one of the smaller European powers.

"Mr. Secretary," the Ambassador said with a feverish look, "what about that loan we want?"

The Secretary told this little tale with a humorous glint in his eyes, to illustrate the difficulties of his position at this moment. Those difficulties are indeed very great.

We are confronted with an improvised Europe which looks to a seemingly rich America for a way out. There are some parallels with the situation that existed after 1918. The aftermath then was a deep resentment of the USA—the kind of feeling you have about a distant relative who goes on enjoying his wealth while you struggle to keep your family alive.

THIS TIME the same elements are present but greatly accentuated. Just when we need to collaborate most closely with western Europe, the elements of a major explosion are scattered freely about.

I would like to try in this and another column or two to explore the attitudes on both sides of the Atlantic. If we are to have anything like a peaceful world, we must try to understand the worries of our neighbors and what they mean for us.

Men like Byrnes, who must study the European requests and do something about them, are overwhelmed by the size of the problem. They must measure these requests against certain realities that Europeans sometimes do not seem to take into account.

First comes the present financial position of the United States. The national debt during the war has gone close to the three hundred billion mark.

For a Nation that until very recent times had no more than a normal debt this is a staggering sum. Interest service on it alone is more than the entire Federal budget of 30 years ago.

Americans both in and out of Government are worrying about how it can be scaled down to at least reasonable dimensions. They want to know whether the advance of new billions to Europe will not mean a further jump in the national debt. They think about the value of the bonds they have bought and the money they have in bulging savings banks.

ALL THIS is directly reflected in the political realities on Capitol Hill. The isolationists and the ultranationalists have a ready-made issue. They're beginning to shout that we can keep the atomic bomb and do as we damn please anywhere in the world.

But quite apart from this lunatic fringe there are more fundamental political realities that have to be faced. A quick, easy way to get votes is to give people what they want.

You can please everyone, or almost everyone, by lowering taxes and ending rationing. You can make those gestures if you don't bother too much about the future or about the rest of the world. You're beginning to hear that kind of campaign noise from both sides of the political fence.

These are realities which confront the President and the men around him who must make the decisions. They are realities which Europe in its misery and uncertainty seldom considers.

The British case is in today's headlines. They have a set of realities that we over here tend too often to ignore.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Italo-Austrian Frontier

I thoroughly approve and agree with every one of Sumner Welles' suggestions in his column of September 12, with the exception of his solution for the frontier question between Italy and Austria. I feel that this would be the proper time to "right a wrong" which was committed about a quarter of a century ago, in connection with the unjust and unjustifiable action to allot, supposedly for purely defensive, but actually for militaristic and imperialistic reasons, southern Tyrol to Italy. If my memory serves me right, this territory, including such cities as Bozen (now Italianized to Bolzano), Meran, Franzenfeste (now Italianized to Fortezza), was inhabited at that time by about a quarter of a million people, about 90 per cent of whom were of Austrian stock, speaking the German language. These people resented, to a very great degree, and justly so, being forced to become Italians. Furthermore this very frontier settlement of some 25 years ago was regretted and criticized by unbiased experts as one of the outstanding injustices of the peace settlements. Amongst the severest critics was the well-known British statesman and author, James Bryce.

An 18-Year-Old Speaks

I am an 18-year-old.

It seems to me that many parents who write in to their congressmen to halt the draft, are being very selfish.

Sure, they don't want their boys' schooling interrupted. But what about the young fellows of our age who went in the service a couple of years ago and remained there throughout the war. They would have preferred going to school, too.

I believe the draft should be continued, and men of all ages up to 35 should be taken to serve, if they have not already.

Let's be fair about this thing. Those who have already given at least two years of service to their country deserve to be released now.

Those who haven't yet served should do so for a two-year period.

Hitler's Peace Efforts

In the September 6 issue of The Post you bring an article by Edd Johnson entitled, "Now it can be told; Gestapo lured ace British spy to talk peace, kidnaped him," which claims to give a first hand account of attempted peace overtures on the part of Hitler during the period of the "phoney war" in 1939, prior to the German invasion of the Lowlands. The article mentions that one of the factors which thwarted Hitler's peace efforts was the "failure of the Hess mission." Hess, according to the writer, flew to England in 1939 with a peace offer from Hitler. After his internment in England, Mr. Johnson indicates, Hitler decided on the invasion of the Lowlands.

Your office does not seem to be aware of the gross inaccuracy of facts. Hess did not fly to England until May, 1941, about a year after the invasion of the Lowlands and almost a year after the fall of France. How could the "failure of his mission" have had anything to do with the German invasion of the Lowlands?

This mistake is grave enough to arouse some doubt in the mind of any serious reader as to the veracity of the entire story. There is entirely too much glib reporting in the American press on foreign matters, reporting which sacrifices accuracy of fact to sensationalism. I think any editor would do well to check facts more closely before putting this and similar articles into print.

EVA M. LOEWENFELD.

Chevy Chase, Md., Sept. 7.

Editor's note: The story was a Chicago Sun story, and, though it did not say that Hess flew to England in 1939, the juxtaposition of happenings gave that impression.

'Doctors' Dilemma'

Your editorial on July 22 entitled "Doctors' Dilemma", from my personal knowledge and those of my friends, is not a true statement of the facts. I refer specifically to your statement "With relatively few exceptions, our economically privileged classes, because of the cost of medical education and the time required to complete it." In my class and in the school as a whole at least 75 per cent would not fall in your "privileged classes."

Your statement "it is reasonable to that another result (of our educational methods) has been to exclude from the profession many poor young men with great natural healing talents" is without foundation if you will consider the great number of present-day physicians who were born poor. The only barriers to the medical profession to anyone is a lack of ambition, lack of willingness to sacrifice and a distaste for hard work. In my medical class there were students who worked as night watchmen, drove cabs during the holidays, etc.

The very "elevation of requirements for initiation" of which you accused the American Medical Association of instituting has been responsible for the production of well-trained physicians which has provided the American Army with superior medical service of which we all boast. W. N.

Use Southern Docks

I have been wondering for months why our Southern leaders—or editors, or economists—if any—our bankers, businessmen and politicians—have done nothing toward having some of the many thousands of our fine fighting men brought back into the States through some—or all—of our Southern ports.

Why should New York and Boston practically monopolize all of this wonderfully profitable traffic?

Of course, there are no facilities for docking such big vessels as the Queen Mary, the Queen Elizabeth and Cunard lines owners would not send the Queen ships south anyway, but a great many small ships, such as leased Italian and American-owned liners and many Government-owned vessels, particularly the very small Victory and Liberty ships could be docked safely at most of our Southern ports.

Fighting men from the South, the Middle West, the Northwest, Southwest and the Pacific Northwest may reach their homes just as quickly, probably much quicker, in thousands of cases, if landed at our Southern ports, like Mobile, New Orleans, Lake Charles, Port Arthur, Houston or Corpus Christi.

Removing Controls

By Janet R. Keith

Canadian Policy

CANADA WILL retain her wartime controls over production and prices until shortages of civilian goods are overcome and the danger of inflation has passed.

"So long as necessities are in short supply, and so long as many thousands of people are eagerly looking for articles that have been off the market in the last few years, the removal of price control could not fail to start a sharp inflationary rise in prices," said Mr. Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, in a recent address to the nation. "And it is not just the scramble for limited supplies that would force prices upward. We still have the problem of higher costs of production, particularly during the change-over when there are transitional costs to be met and when volume is relatively small in industries converting to peacetime activities."

IN CANADA the worst part of the last war's inflation came after the armistice. This time, the government, which has permitted the cost-of-living index to rise only 2 per cent in the past 3½ years, intends to hold steadfastly to its stabilization policy.

Rationing of sugar and butter will continue, because there is not enough to go around under unrestricted distribution. The reimposition of meat rationing, announced before the end of the Pacific war, has gone into effect with the sole objective of reducing meat consumption in Canada in order to provide direct aid to the hungry peoples of Europe.

"We cannot ignore our responsibilities to those who fought the good fight under enemy occupation," said Finance Minister Ilsley recently. "Without food, political stability is impossible; we must not permit misery to sow the seeds of discord and misunderstanding."

Exactly one year ago the Canadian government adopted the basic principle that goods which have been off the market during the war must reappear at 1941 prices. That policy still stands.

The price board took the position that a general recognition of cost increases as sufficient grounds for price increases would mean the destruction of the price ceiling and a resultant "creeping inflation." Any industry which can demonstrate that its over-all financial position is seriously affected by the price ceiling may apply for relief. Manufacturers of aluminum pots and pans have already been granted the right to increase their prices 15 per cent over the 1939 level. Several automobile manufacturers are said to be asking for special consideration.

After VE-Day the government provided relief for some manufacturers by removing or reducing special wartime taxes on six groups of commodities: gas and electric appliances, radios, phonographs, radio tubes, building materials, camera and photo supplies, automobiles. In most cases these taxes had been paid by the manufacturer and included in his price to the consumer. When the taxes were eliminated, manufacturers were not obliged to pass the saving on to the consumer by reducing the price of the goods in question. But the prices board expects that as supplies become more plentiful and competition keener, the tax reductions will be passed on in the form of lower prices.

ON THE FACE of it, these tax reductions appeared to discriminate in favor of certain classes of manufacturers. But the prices board explained that the special excise taxes were designed originally as discouragements to production. The tax changes were intended to remove wartime discriminations against these manufacturers, and encourage them to start producing civilian goods again as rapidly as possible.

PRODUCTION CONTROLS are being removed quickly as scarce goods again become available. During the last 18 months the number of production restrictions has been reduced from 300 to 64. Generally speaking, those that remain encourage the production of essential civilian goods.

There are still many shortages which call for continuance of control measures. Housing accommodation for rent is in drastically short supply, building materials have to be guided into the kind of houses urgently needed by veterans, demands for pulp and paper still exceed supply.

Canada is justly proud of the fact that her cost of living has risen less during World War II than that of any other country. With the cooperation of all her citizens, she hopes to steer her economy safely through the difficult transition period.

Food for Europe

Just one more citizen asking you to support a program of maximum assistance to Europe. A continuance of rationing will be no hardship to us here, and it will be the only way to get these people back on their feet and on the right road to permanent peace.

WINIFRED HAYWARD.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

MacArthur In Japan

A MONTH HAS passed since Japan agreed to surrender, and General MacArthur has as yet taken only a few preliminary measures to eliminate for all time, as the Potsdam Declaration puts it, "the authority and influence of those who have deceived and misled the people of Japan into embarking on a world conquest." Many are asking whether this means that we are not going to do what we said we were going to do, and that General MacArthur's moderate and cautious methods are leading to a soft, that is to say an inconclusive, peace.

LIPPMANN

There is as yet no evidence, it seems to me, for thinking this. There is, on the other hand, very good reason to think that he is being deliberate and cautious at this stage precisely because he understands well the real problem of enforcing the Potsdam Declaration. He has to put himself in a position where he is not dependent upon the good faith of the Emperor and of the Japanese governing classes.

HE MUST, in other words, first achieve an occupation of Japan which gives him such a grip on the country that disobedience and resistance to his orders are impossible. He has not yet got such a grip on Japan. His troops are ashore at perhaps eight points along the eastern coast, and though they are highly equipped and in battle array, they are greatly outnumbered by the two and a half million Japanese who were under arms when the occupation began.

General MacArthur's first task, clearly, has been to get the Japanese army disarmed and disbanded as he builds up his own forces and places them at the strategic points of the four Japanese Islands. Until that was done, there has been no use issuing political orders which might be obeyed but might also not be obeyed—might quite conceivably have resulted in a fanatic rebellion, or a prolonged guerilla campaign in the mountainous interior, and the massacre of Allied prisoners of war in the vast reaches of the Japanese aggression.

THE OCCUPATION of Japan has to precede the reform of Japan. Otherwise we cannot be sure of enforcing our terms. It is necessary, therefore, for us here at home to realize how formidable a military operation it is to occupy Japan. It is, as a matter of fact, a bloodless version of the invasion of Japan. To say that it is bloodless does not mean that it is like landing a party of tourists. The Army has to go in fully prepared for battle. It must take possession of the points it would have had to fight for in order to paralyze Japanese power to resist, and to make secure its own positions and its land and sea communications.

If General MacArthur and the United States Government were being taken in by the meekness of some of the Japanese, they would not be carrying out the occupation in such a thoroughgoing military fashion.

THAT THE procedure is slow is too bad. But it has been unavoidable, and the disadvantages are a small price to pay for not having to invade Japan. The first landing in Japan had been set for November, and it was to have been a relatively small operation—namely the seizure of the southern tip of the southern Island of Kyushu in order to obtain close-in airfields for the main invasion. That was to have taken place in the Tokyo area some months later. On this timetable only a fraction of the troops for the full occupation of Japan were in the Western Pacific when the Japanese government agreed to surrender a month ago. That is the basic explanation of what is happening. General MacArthur is conducting a military movement several months ahead of the schedule of preparations for it.

It might be said, too, that Congress and the public have not made it easier for MacArthur to move faster by their own pressure to demobilize so fast that the efficiency of all our forces has been considerably reduced.

UNTIL OUR forces are in full occupation, which will still take some time, and until the Japanese army has turned in its arms and been disbanded, the surrender will be unconditional only on paper and not yet as a matter of fact. At this stage General MacArthur must be the judge of what demands he can make of the Japanese authorities and be sure of being obeyed. For though the shooting has stopped, he is still in the midst of a military operation which must be concluded successfully before the political operation can really begin.

THE FEARFUL blunder in Korea is, however, a warning signal to the supreme commander and to the Administration here at home to perfect their political plans with some of the same care and forethought that have gone to making our war plans. General directives are not enough though for Korea, which is a testing ground of liberation in Asia, there does not seem to have been even a general directive.

For Japan our general purposes have been defined. But some of the incidents of the occupation, for example the Tojo muddle, do not enhance American prestige and raise a serious question how far the political program has been thought out and explained to the officers, the men, and to the war correspondents.

Coupon-Filled Casket Draws Laugh at Board

Baltimore, Sept. 14 (AP).—There was a small, satin-lined casket in the window at 3300 Ayrdale ave., Baltimore, today but not a soul shed a tear — everybody just laughed and laughed.

The casket — displayed in the window of a now defunct ration board office—held enough gas and fuel oil rationing stamps to make any onlooker envious, a few weeks ago.

'Piracy' Kept Splinter Fleet Aiding Greeks

By the Associated Press

An American-directed "splinter fleet," kept in operating condition by piracy, supplied the Greek resistance forces for a year ended last October.

The Office of Strategic Services, whose men sailed the tiny vessels literally under German guns, told the story yesterday.

Consisting at the peak of 36 caiques, native coastwise vessels ranging from 2 to 80 tons, the fleet was credited by OSS with:

Deliveries of more than 2000 tons of war materiel.

Smuggling into and out of Greece more than 700 agents, saboteurs and resistance leaders.

Sailing 356 missions of more than 60,000 nautical miles, largely through narrow, enemy-controlled Aegean waters, with total casualties of four Greek seamen killed and with only two vessels lost.

Stripped Ships of Vital Parts

The piracy element entered when the caiques, mostly powered by ancient Swedish Diesel engines, began to need repairs.

It was common practice, OSS said, for one of the little ships to stop and board Greek vessels pressed into Nazi coastal service, strip them of vital parts, and set them adrift. Fuel was acquired in the same way.

Explosives and high-octane gas, the latter needed occasionally for planes flying ino Greece on secret missions, were specially dangerous cargo on the "splinter fleet" run. Often the vessels would be under small arms fire from both sides as they negotiated the Samos Straits, less than 1000 yards wide, between Turkey and the Greek island of Samos.

Apparently the Greeks on the island mistook the boats for German cargo carriers and the Turks believed their neutrality was being violated.

The fleet operated out of Cairo, usually making a refueling stop at the British island of Cyprus and sailing to the Dodecanese Islands and the Greek mainland.

Two Bases Maintained

Two clandestine bases, commanded by OSS and code-named "Boston" and "Key West," were maintained virtually under the Germans' noses in the Aegean Islands.

On two occasions vessels of the "splinter fleet" captured small German cargo vessels in close-quarter machine gun battles.

One such capture, OSS said, was made almost single-handed in August, 1944, by Frank G. Varnadore, 19, gunner's mate 3/c, USNR, of Marshtown, Tenn., recruited from the armed guard crew of an Allied ship in Cairo.

When the Nazi vessel challenged, Varnadore, in his cencealed machine gun position forward, held his fire until the German craft was close aboard, then sprayed it with .50 caliber slugs and swarmed over the side with his weapon. After a few more bursts of fire the crew gave up. The cargo of olive oil and spaghetti, intended for a German garrison, padded out the slender ration at the OSS forward base.

GOP, With Eye On Elections, To Plan Bills

By the Associated Press

In a two-hour meeting, House Republicans today pooled their ideas for a program they hope will win the 1946 congressional elections.

Floor Leader Martin of Massachusetts told reporters the caucus, held in executive session, was the first step toward the drafting of a "positive program" of legislation.

It was an "airing" session, not a decision-making one, he said. Martin will appoint a group of five or six members of the Republican steering committee to coordinate the ideas and boil them down. After that, he said, the group will work with the Senate Republicans to iron out any differences of opinion.

"It will be a short program," Martin said. "We don't want the people to go to sleep while they're reading it."

No specific bills before the Congress were discussed, he added. But emphasis was placed on "ending wartime controls" quickly and reducing taxes.

President Truman's program came in for considerable discussion, members said privately. Martin said only that he "was mentioned."

One Republican commented that the general consensus of this phase of the talks was that "the President is willing for Congress to do whatever he wants them to do."

This member of the caucus, asking not to be quoted by name, also said that the question of demobilizing the armed forces was of interest, from the political viewpoint. Some members thought it would be a wise move for the party to push openly for more rapid demobilizing, rather than wait for the President to "steal the ball" and gain political capital out of some judiciously timed announcement speeding up the discharge of veterans.

Several members suggested that the party get more action on a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, an issue on which Democrats are split. Southern Democrats have battled FEPC strenuously.

Veterans' Group to Visit Possible Hospital Sites

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Sixth), advised the Allegany County commissioners today that a committee from the Veterans' Administration soon would visit possible sites in western Maryland for a veterans' hospital. A 500-bed hospital is to be erected, the Congressman said.

Tigers Hold Lead, Beat A's, 1-0, in 5 Innings

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

For the Washington ball club, this is it—the five-game series beginning today with the Tigers. No club ever had a better chance to win the pennant, or lose it. Anything less than three victories for the Nats in the five games could ultimately cost them the flag.

Povich

In any event, the Nats will have to sweat it out after finishing with the Tigers. They end their season a full week ahead of the other clubs in the league and will have to stand helplessly during those last seven days while the Detroit club decides the Nats' fate by its final week's play in the West. The Redskins move into Griffith Stadium on September 23 after the Nats close shop at home. The Nats were talked out of their home park by George P. Marshall, that supersalesman and beloved figure.

This show-down series involves the Nats with the league-leading club, but their luck could be worse. They could be meeting the Yankees, for instance, a club that has licked them seven times in their last nine meetings. The Tigers have been no such problem to the Nats this year. Washington has beaten the Tigers ten times in 17 engagements.

If the Washington pitching goes into the Detroit series slightly stoop-shouldered, that will be completely understandable. The Nats' pitchers have been carrying the club on their collective backs all season and that's why the Nats have any kind of a chance to win the pennant. No team ever owed its pitching so much except the Hitless Wonder White Sox of 1906. We remember them vividly, because they were in our time, at the impressionable age of one year.

That's where the Nats appear to have the big bulge on the Tigers—in the pitching. It's conceded that the Washington can't hit with the Tigers, and the Nats don't own any kind of a home run clouter whereas the Tigers boast Rudy York and Hank Greenberg, with Roy Cullenbine and Eddie Mayo occasional four-base threats.

But in the pitching, ah, the Nats are what you might call well-armed. No staff in the league has Washington's depth as represented by Dutch Leonard, Roger Wolff, Mickey Haefner, Alex Carresquel, Marino Pieretti, Johnny Niggeling and now Walter Masterson. Ossie Bluege's only pitching problem is to give them all enough work.

In contrast, the Tigers have been floundering for lack of pitching despite Dizzy Trout's recent comeback. Aside from Trout and Hal Newhouser, the Tigers don't have a solid risk. Al Benton hasn't lasted in his last seven starts after winning eight in a row. The Detroit hitting has been taking up the slack in a great measure, though.

The Tigers go into the series with the man best calculated to win a game—Hal Neuhouser. His feats against the Nats the past two seasons have been prodigious. He's beaten Washington the last ten ttimes he faced 'em. Somehow, however, Bluege is not terrified by the prospect of his Nats facing Newhouser. They haven't licked him since 1943, but they've had him on the ropes on plenty occasions when one more hit would have gotten him out of there. The fact that the Nats never got that one more hit, however, attests to the skill of Mr. Newhouser.

Detroit won't be at its best for the series here, aside from its pitching troubles. Newhouser is still complaining of a lame back. Hank Greenberg will be playing on a sprained ankle, and Eddie Mayo may not be in the lineup at all after hurting his shoulder in a collision with Rudy York in Yankee Stadium. Mayo couldn't have picked a worse guy to collide with, incidentally. York collides with gusto.

If, perchance, the Nats win the pennant, they can trace their triumph to an amazing succession of opportunist pitching. At points when the Nats' staff appeared to bog down under the weight of the double-headers piled on the club by the front office, Bluege invariably came up with a pitching sensation to tide the team over.

Four games in particular stand out as the critical ones. There was that series of double-headers with the A's and Red Sox last month when the Nats were compelled to play ten games in five days. When Bluege ran out of pitchers, he dug Rookie Walter Holborow off the bull-pen scrap pile. Holborow beat Boston with a two-hit shutout. Later in the series with Bluege still desperate, he gave Carrasquel a starting chance. Carrasquel also shutout the Red Sox.

The other day, with Bluege again desperate for pitchers, he started Pete Appleton, driftwood from the Browns, who hadn't started a major league game in three years. In the presence of President Truman, Appleton shut the Browns out with five hits. And the other night, Walter Masterson, three days out of the Navy, pitching to a Cleveland team he hadn't seen before, outpitched Bob Feller and turned in a two-hit shutout. Pitchers are handy guys.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Atlanta, Sept. 14.—While Doug MacArthur is at it, he should do something about changing Japanese sports. Such a change would play an important role in the reeducation of the little brown dastards.

CONSIDINE

A Japanese baseball pitcher, when knocked out of the box, doesn't retire to the showerbath room. Instead, he picks up a bull-pen catcher and plays a fiery game of catch with the guy for the remainder of the game. He does this usually along the foul line, in full view of the grandstand.

The idea here is that if he walked off to his well-deserved bath he would lose face. So even if he's knocked out of the box in the first inning, and the game goes into extra innings, he still stands out there in front of the fans and throws his fool arm off . . . proving that circumstances beyond his control brought about his removal from the box, and that he still has a lot of fight in his arm.

Jimmy Young, the INS correspondent who was tossed in a Jap clink for several prewar months, was telling us when he returned that he went to one ball game in Japan where every man in the stands wore pinstriped pants and a derby. Seems that Prince Konoye attended the game. So the fans had to come in formal dress. Can you imagine the customers at Ebbets Field dressing for Truman?

I forgot the bum's name but a Jap Davis Cup player committed suicide by jumping off a ship which was taking him home . . . after a tennis campaign in which he had won only about 80 per cent of the matches.

A former first secretary of the old Japanese Embassy in Washington gave me an interview on Japanese sports in December, 1936. The significance of his words didn't hit me in the kisser until Pearl Harbor. Here is what he said:

"In Japan we make a different use of sports. Sports teaches us many lessons important to our Japanese character. For instance, there is never any cheering at one of our sumo (wrestling) or fencing matches. The same is true of our jiu-jitsu.

"These matches are put on to instruct the audiences. In such matches we prove that a small opponent, properly conditioned, can take the measure of a much larger opponent if he acts quickly, with surprise and courage. A huge sumo artist, for instance, can be brought to earth by a man half his weight, if that man strikes unexpectedly, artfully dodges any counterattack, and strikes again."

There used to be a saying that Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton, the psychology behind the Pearl Harbor attack seems to have been bred on the playing fields of all Japan.

I saw some Jap athletes last month in a prison camp outside of Chungking—a prison which the Chinese whimsically named "Liberty Village." The Chinese captors permitted 200 so-called "good" Japs the right to play their native sports, and also put up two basketball courts and gave the Japs instructions in the American game.

The baskeball courts were empty while I was at the prison but in a compound the Japs were contentedly playing a kind of Jap-dodge ball and some were engaged in a primary form of sumo.

The dodge-ball boys were very grim about the rollicking game. They did everything but break their necks, trying to escape being hit with the ball and thus eliminated. The throwers sweat manfully, feinting this way and that with the ball before letting it fly.

In the sumo ring successive pairs of Japs squatted face to face, their hunched knees almost touching. The point of the game was not to be knocked off balance or muscled out of the ten-foot circle which enclosed the competitors.

Action consisted of loud slapping of faces, much hunched footwork, pushing and butting. Only the Chinese guards seemed to get any kick out of the preposterous performances.

It is no secret that much of the American character comes from our sports, and our mental approach to sports. Along with physical endowments, United States sports breed into our youngsters a sense of fairness, a knowledge that luck is a sterile substitute for hard work; determination, self-denial, ability to "take it without bellyaching." General MacArthur is the author of college intramurals sports programs, having installed the first of such total sports-participation ideas at West Point when he was superintendent of he academy. A similar program in Japanese schools would speed the day when Japs can be accepted by civilized human society.

Phillies Edge Chicubs, 4-3; Drop 2d, 6-0

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, who staggered through a first game to drop a 4-3 decision to last place Philadelphia, found the batting punch that has eluded them for a week and hammered the Phils for a 6-0 shutout in the abbreviated second game of a double-header here today.

That victory, behind the four-hit pitching of Claude Passeau, retained Chicago's narrow 2½ game lead over St. Louis, temporarily at least, in the red hot National League flag race.

St. Louis, however, has a twi-night double-header with Brooklyn tonight, and by winning both games can shave the Cubs' lead to two games.

First Game See-Saws

In the first game the Cubs held a one-run lead twice, but could get only seven hits off the offerings of the veteran Hugh Mulcahy, recently discharged from the service, and Anton Karl. In addition, they came through with an error that scored what eventually turned out to be the winning run.

But in the second they blasted two hurlers off the mound and had the crowd of 4653 that braved the cold, drizzly weather shouting itself hoarse before the game was called because of darkness after Philadelphia had batted in the sixth.

Claude Passeau held the Phils to four hits as he won his seventeenth victory of the year, and led the attack on the Philly hurlers with two hits in three times up. He also scored twice.

The Cubs started the second game scoring when Peanuts Lowrey singled and then scored all the way from first on Phil Cavarretta's long single to right. They added three more in the second. Bill Nicholson singled and went to second on Mickey Livingston's sacrifice, and scored on Passau's single. Roy Hughes doubled to score Passeau, and then came in on Don Johnson's single. In the third Passeau led off with asingle and scored from the first when Isadora Leon, second Philly hurler, threw wild to first on Hughes' sacrifice. Hughes came in on Lowrey's fly to left.

Phils Win in Seventh

In the first game, Cavarretta gave the Cubs a 1-0 lead in the fourth when he was safe on an error and scored on singles by Andy Pafko and Nicholson, but Philadelphia came back to score twice in the fifth when Andy Seminick walked, went to second on Jake Powell's single and came in on Lennie Merullo's error on John Antonelli's grounder. Antonelli scored on Freddie Daniels' single.

Giants Beat Reds With Rally in 7th

Cincinnati, Sept. 14 (AP).—Faced with the prospect of losing their seventh straight game by a one-run margin, the New York Giants rallied in the seventh today to turn a 5-4 defeat by the Cincinnati Reds into a 7-5 victory.

Singles by Nap Reyes and Ernie Lombardi plus a pair of doubles by Clyde Klutz and Johnny Rucker produced the trio of runs for the Giants. Rube Fischer, second of three New York hurlers, was credited with the win, while John Hetki, third of four Redleg twirlers, was the loser.

The Reds were first to score, grabbing three runs off Starter Bill Emmerich in the second inning on a walk, a home run by Eddie Miller, a triple by Al Lakeman and a squeeze play. The Giants came back with two tallies in the fourth off young Herb Wehmeier as the result of two walks and a pair of singles. But the Reds countered with two more in their half of that frame on singles by Lain Clay and Kermit Wahl and a home run by Lakeman.

No Tellin' What a Goat'll Do to Have Its Picture Taken

The porters at Union Station were in a dither. Why the crowds? What great celebrity was arriving? Surely, at least a king; otherwise why all the photographers and newsmen? Then the newsmen opened a path among them and in clear view was the object of their feverish labors. Billy X it was, new Navy mascot, who was accorded a regal reception yesterday as he stepped off the train en route to Annapolis from Texas. Martha M. Miller, 3½, who is shyly petting the nanny, and Comdr. Harry Ransom, left, were part of the reception committee. The Western-looking gent is Constable Joe Luther, custodian of Billy X, on the long trip north, and a Texas Ranger, by gosh.

Joe DiMaggio Discharged, Out for Year

St. Petersburg, Fla., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Joe DiMaggio, one of baseball's greatest outfielders before joining the Army, was medically discharged today because of stomach ulcers.

The New oYrk Yankee star, however, announced that he will not rejoin the club for this season as only three weeks remain. He will leave for New York in a day or two and after conferring with the Yankee front office will go to his home in San Francisco.

DiMaggio was given his discharge at the Don-Ce-Sar Army Hospital where he had been confined for some time. Since joining the Army in 1943 he had been troubled with stomach ulcers periodically and his discharge had been expected for some time.

Injuries Beset W. & M. Gridders

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Injuries have begun making their appearance among members of the William and Mary football squad and, with the opening game little more than a week off, the problem has become one of real seriousness to Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray.

McCray said this afternoon that Dave Bucher, 188-pound back and cocaptain of the Indians, will be out for 10 days, because of a bruised shoulder, and that Adolph Null, another veteran back and letterman, will be benched for the same period because of a separation of muscles in his shoulder.

Others nursing hurts of a more or less serious degree are Carl Pirkle, first year guard, who has a sprained arm, and Bob Shegry. Jack Hickman, back, who has been slowed up because of a wrenched knee, is expected to be back in action in the next few days.

Yanks' Gate Nears Million Mark

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—The New York Yankees may soon join the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers in the million paid attendance club. With 12 home games to go, the American Leaguers have attracted 913,129 customers. If they hit the million it will be the first time all three New York clubs made the grade in the same season.

Navy's Bewhiskered Billy X 'Mugged' Just Like Admiral

The Navy Academy has a new goat.

Chester I, if the name sticks, successor to Billy IX, ninth in a long line of Billies, official mascots of the academy, arrived at Union Station yesterday in state befitting his dignity and nobility of office.

He came from Fredericksburg, Tex., home town of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, in whose honor he was christened Chester by the admiral's neighbors.

Accompanied by Joe Constable of Dallas, Tex., especially commissioned a Texas Ranger for his assignment by Governor Coke Stevenson, Chester was met by a delegation of wide-hatted Texans now residing in Washington. They included Harry Crookes, insurance man, formerly of Houston; Dale Miller, Washington manager of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce; L. T. "Call me Tex" Easley, Associated Press Texas regional manager, of Fort Worth; Walter Hornaday of the Dallas News and Les. Carpenter of the Dallas Times-Herald.

When Billy IX died ten days ago, same say of grief after Army shellacked Navy last fall, Capt. Charles O. Humphreys, director of athletics of the academy telephoned a call for help to Crookes. Crookes telephoned Silliman Evans, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, but formerly of Fort Worth, Tex. Evans called Governor Stevenson. Governor Stevenson radioed an emergency call to all Texas goat farms.

Accompanying the goat was a telegram from Governor Stevenson, saying:

"Patriotic citizens of Fredericksburg, to honor Admiral Chester W. Nimitz found the finest goat in Texas to present to the academy in name of their fellow townsman.

"They picked 17 royally bred Angora billies. I traveled 200 miles on a busy day to choose the goat they have called Chester.

"For many years, particularly during the war period, Gillespie County has sent its young men to the Navy. Out here they call it their navy. The Navy goat is an important part of Navy morale. This Angora is a symbol of the strength of Texas. Fredericksburg delivered Chester, the goat, to Dallas. It is reported to me that Chester spent an unhappy week in a Dallas prison camp.

"Let nothing conflict with your mission."

Three of Penn State's five all-America football players were produced in the period following World War I.

Michigan Tests Great Lakes in Opener Today

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—America's first peacetime college football season in four years, opens officially tomorrow.

Although numerous games have been played among the smaller colleges since Central Michigan whipped Alma back on August 24, it remains for tomorrow's Michigan-Great Lakes tilt to inaugurate the so-called gib time grid activities.

A crowd of some 30,000 is expected to sit in on the proceedings at Ann Arbor and see for themselves whether the Wolverines again will be a powerhouse this season.

Facing a tough 10-game schedule, including Army and Navy, Michigan has anly eight lettermen back. However, Coach Fritz Crisler is hopeful of developing a dangerous eleven built around Captain Joe Ponsetto, a 190-pound quarterback.

The Bluejackets, coached by Lieut. Paul Brown, former Ohio State mentor, are reported not quite as strong as during 1943 when they spoiled Notre Dame's bid for an undefeated season, but the Sailors still are generally favored to win.

Other games tomorrow include: Oberlin vs. Rochester at Rochester, N. Y.; Rensselaer vs. Middlebury at Middlebury, Conn.; Coast Guard Academy vs. Tufts at Medford, Mass.; Newport Torpedo Squadron vs. Worcester Tech at Worcester, Mass.; Ursinius vs. Swarthmore at Swarthmore, Pa.; Fresno State vs. California Poly at San Luis Obispo and Baylor vs. the Blackland Army Air at Waco, Tex. (Night). On Sunday, Camp Beale meets the El Toro (Calif) Marines at Santa Ana.

Cy Blanton Rites To Be Held Today

Shawnee, Okla., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Darrell (Cy) Blanton, 36, former pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, Pittsburgh Pirates and Hollywood Stars, who died yesterday in a Norma, Okla., hospital. Blanton leaves his wife and four children.

Browns Beat Red Sox, 4-1; Miller Star

Boston, Sept. 14 (AP).—Right-hander Jack Miller, victim of Dick Fowler's no-hitter in his last previous start in Philadelphia, defeated the Boston Red Sox, 4-1, today to give the St. Louis Browns a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Miller held the Sockers to five hits, thereby repeating the performance he gave against the Athletics, and had the game under control all the way. The Red Sox escaped a shutout in the sixth inning when Jack Tobin belted a pinch-hit double and scored on Ty LaForest's single.

The Browns collected 11 of their 12 hits and al lof their runs before Starter Otis Clark gave way to Tobin.

They scored once in the second inning on a pass and two singles and collected two more tallies in the third, when George McQuinn singled, Gene Moore tripled and Vern Stephens connected safely.

Frank Mancuso clubbed his first home of the season over the left-field wall in the first of the sixth.

E. & H., Milligan To Clash Tonight

Bristol, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—The kickoff tomorrow night when Emory and Henry College here plays Milligan College of Tennessee will stir the first dust of the 1945 football season in Virginia, a season to which football fans are looking more eagerly than in the immediately past seasons harried by war.

Like other schools, Emory and Henry's team is not back on a post-war basis yet. Coach T. L. Porterfield is still working with Navy V-12 trainees, although the Milligan team is using civilians.

Rugged Drills For V.M.I. Eleven

Lexington, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—The fighting squadron or Virginia Military Institute today ran the gamut of training technicalities, Coach Pooley Hubert putting the Cadets through a stiff session which included dummy scrimmage, defense punting and pass protection and blocking.

Walter Vannoy, the 150-pound letterman from Lynchburg, sparked the aerial attacks, his perfect potshots from all angles to the receivers earning the praise of Coach Hubert. Also outstanding in the drills were the long gains registered on quick-opening plays by Lynn Chewning, 190-pound freshman quarterback from Richmond, and Bob Thomason, 174-pound tailback from Leeds, Ala. Bill Barrett of Augusta, Ga., gave a fine exhibition of fancy broken-field running.

Court Orders Sale Of Wheeling Track

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Sale of the Wheeling Downs race track on November 3 was ordered today by the Ohio County Court, terminating litigation which began when the track went into receivership in 1931.

Maier Steals Home With Winning Run

Philadelphia, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers protected their slim American League lead with a 1 to 0 victory over the Athletics today, when Bob Maier stole home in the fifth inning just before a rain storm washed out the game.

As a result, Manager Steve O'Neill's hirelings gained an even break in the four-game series and left for Washington asured of the leader's role when they tangle with the speedy Senators tomorrow in the first two bouts of their crucial five-game series.

So violently did Catcher Buddy Rosar of the Athletics protest Maier's game-winning run that he was thumbed to the showers by Plate Umpire Art Passarella. Also, the official scorer plastered Buddy witr an error for failing to plant the ball in the middle of Maier's back.

No Theatening Gestures

Up to the fateful fifth it had been a sparkling pitchers' duel betwen Les Mueller of the Tigers and Dick Fowler, the mountainous young Athletic righthander who delivered a no-hit, no-run effort against the St. Louis Browns last week. Neither side had even threatened to score.

Maier opened the fifth with a single to deep short, the second Tiger blow off Fowler, and Paul Richards also beat one out in the same general locality. Mueller sacrificed them along, and that brought up Joe Hoover, Tiger shortstop, who was passed intentionally, loading the bases.

That brought up Skeeter Webb, and on Fowler's first pitch to him Maier tore for home. It was a pitchout, and Maier was caught cold. Rosar took the ball firmly in his right hand and charged out to meet the runner. Maier, some 10 feet from the plate, stopped suddenly, then dove under and somewhat around Rosar.

Rosar Protests Violently

Rosar went over the Tiger trickster, clearly missing the tag, and Maier scrambled and crawled on to slap the dish with his hand. When Rosar jerked around and saw Passarella's decision he went into a sustained protest that ended only some five minutes later, when the arbiter told him to be gone.

There was no doubt that Maier swung 4 or 5 feet into the infield in making his miraculous escape. His footprints were there for all to see, and Rosar didn't fail to point them out. But Passarella apparently based his decision on the fact that Maeir's hands and head scarcely left the base path as he swung under Rosar.

The crowd shouted even louder than Rosar, but President Will Harridge of the American League, who witnessed the strange play from a front box, maintained a dignified silence.

A double play wiped the remaining Tigers from the bases, and that was all until, a moment after Irv Hall opened the Athletics' sixth with a base hit, the skies opened and sent the two teams scampering for cover. Thirty minutes later the infield still was hub-deep in water and the game was called.

Fowler Gives Four Hits

In all, the Tigers worked Fowler for four hits, while Mueller checked the A's with a pair. Hall's blow in the sixth did not count officially.

Both Hank Greenberg and Eddie Mayo, the Tigers' two prize cripples, declared flatly they intended to play in tomorrow's opening doubleheader at Washington, and Pitcher Hal Newhouser, ace of the Detroit mound staff, said just as positively he would work the first game. Stubby Overmire was Manager O'Neill's choice for the second tussle in the Capital.

Newhouser, who for two previous days had complained of a painful "lump" under his salary shoulder blade, threw a few hard ones today and said the wing "felt fine."

Greenberg's left ankle still was badly swollen and caused him to limp slightly, but the club doctor gave it a going-over, including a pain-killing injection, and told Hank he would be able to use it tomorrow. Mayo, the peppery second baseman and stary play-maker, also was severly handicapped by a lame shoulder that hurt him every time he swung a bat or stooped for a grounder, but he was determined to play in the crucial Senator series.

"I'll be in there," he promised. "I don't know how much good I'll do, but I'm going to give it all I've got."

Gobbler Backs Impress McEver

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—Virginia Tech's Gobblers continued to polish up their weapons for a return to the grid wars with a scrimmage session today in the rain, and Coach MacCauley McEver expressed himself as well pleased with the running of Bubbles Whiteman, a speedy 155-pounder, and the veteran Harry Bushkar, two of his outstanding backs. The work of J. Ratliff, former Christiansburg (Va.) High School ace, in hauling the ball, also was a standout of today's workout.

Nats, Tigers Lead With Aces Today

Newhouser vs. Haefner.
Overmire vs. Leonard.

That's the pitching program for today as the league-leading Detroit Tigers and Nats swing into their show-down series for the American League pennant at Griffith Stadium at 1:30 p. m., in a double header.

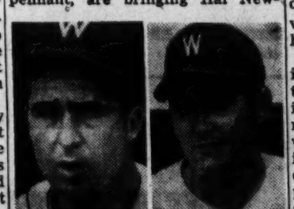
Washington, gripped anew by pennant fever following the recent successes of the Nats who have won nine of their last clever starts and are only a half game behind Detroit, will provide sell-out crowds for the series of five games.

Reserved seats to today's doubleheader and a second twin bill tomorrow have been sold out for weeks, but more than 10,000 general admission tickets will go on sale at 9 a. m. when the gates to the park will open.

Today has been designated as Ladies Day despite the importance of the series and wimen fans will be admitted on payment of the 35-cent Federal tax and service charge.

Manager Ossie Bluege is thrusting his two best pitching arms forward for today's two games, Haefner was the most effective hurler on the staff last week and Leonard demonstrated in his last outing, when he struck out ten White Sox, that he has recovered from his ailing shoulder.

The Tigers, hopeful of killing off the Washington threat for the pennant, are bringing Hal Newhouser back into action today after eight days on the bench with a sprained back.



Haefner Leonard

Haefner, who has been assigned to duel Newhouser, will be meeting a pitcher who hasn't lost to the Nats since 1943 and who has run up ten straight victories over the Washington club.

It will be an all-left-handed pitching schedule for the Tigers with Frank Overmire pitching the second game against Leonard. In contrast to Newhouser's success against the Nats, Overmire has been a soft touch for the Washington club all year. Manager Steve O'Neill, however, is troubled by a desperate pitching shortage.

The Tigers will move into the series handicapped by injuries. Hank Greenbuerg, who has been out of the lineup for four days, will return to his outfield job but he will be playing on a sprained

Second Baseman Eddie Mayo, inspirational member of the Detroit cast, may figure in the Washington series, according to latest reports. Mayo is suffering from a wrenched shoulder that is showing only slow improvement, however. His hitting and fielding has played a potent part in the Tigers' success this year.

It was learned yesterday that Manager O'Neill, already suffering in the pitching department, will not have Tommy Bridges available for the series here. At a Philadelphia hospital yesterday, Bridges was found to have a badly bruised finger on his pitching hand that did not respond to treatment.

Washington's pitching program for tomorrow's doubleheader calls for Roger Wolff and Johnny Niggeling to oppose the Tigers' Dizzy Trout and Al Benton. Niggeling will be working without his customary five and six days rest.

For the single game on Monday, Bluege will have available Walter Masterson, recent shut-out winner over the Indians, with a two-hit game.

Army Cadet Wins at Laurel

3-Year-Old's Stretch Rush Pays $14.20

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Laurel, Md., Sept. 14.—Developing momentum in the stretch, T. E. Bridger's Army Cadet came with a bold closing rush to win the Haste Purse, featuring the Friday program of the Maryland Fair Inc. Army Cadet was a going away winner and put a length between himself and J. W. Martin's Connie's Girl. Third in the field of a dozen three year olds was Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Zax.

A crowd of 10,000 installed Connie's Girl the favorite and her backers smiled as she took the lead in the early stages and looked all the part of a galloping winner. She outfooted Higgs's Ginger and Zax to hold upwards of a length lead approaching the stretch. At this point, Army Cadet, never far out of it, rallied and came to the outside. In the stretch run, Army Cadet wore down his rival under strong handling by Jockey Willie Garner.

Army Cadet, a son of Maeriel, paid $14.20 and was clocked in 1:13 2-5 for the six furlongs over a fast track.

Wiseshot Scampers Home

H. L. Donovan's Wiseshot, a lightly-regarded favorite, scampered home ahead of 11 rivals in the first race. Jockey Buddy Root booted the son of Bold Venture to the wire a length and a half in advance of E. P. Lundberg's Worries with J. M. Rogers' Lord Loudoun in third position at the end of the 6-furlong sprint.

Constance V. set the early pace but Root had Wiseshot within striking distance. When Root went into a drive, Wiseshot disposed of the leader and then held Worries safe in the closing drive.

Mrs. George Fox's Janegri, a 7-year-old mare, won the second race which drew a limit field of a dozen sheap distance horses. Apprentice Donny Padgett sent Janegri into the wire three parts of a length in front of Mrs. A. O. Reid's Broiler with M. Green's Riverbank third. The winner paid $14.60, completed a $70.60 daily double and was clocked in 1:55 1-5 for the mile and a furlong.

BETWEEN RACES—Laurel offers an excellent weekend program, including the $10,000 Eastern Shore and the $15,000 added Bryan O'Hara Handicap . . . Same starting time of 1:45 p. m. . . . Jimmy Stewart, popular trainer, was taken ill yesterday and former Jockey Carl Hanford will handle his horses . . . Steeplechasing here begins October 3 . . . Three stake races for jumpers have been carded . . . Tommy Daly, who mans the public address system here, was back on the job today after being on the sick list . . . Charitable, which broke down yesterday, was destroyed . . . For the second day in a row the daily double was won by a double number—4 and 4 yesterday, 6 and 6 today.

Sugar to 'T'

Lifting of Passing Restriction Seen as Boon to Scoring

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Virginia's football coach, graying Frank Murray, is starting his ninth season here by taking advantage of all possibilities permitted under revised gridiron rules in developing the "T" formation attack the Cavaliers will use for the fifth year.

Coach Murray believes that the opening up of play and particularly the permitting of forward passing anywhere behind the line should add an average of two more touchdowns per game to each team's scoring possibilities this fall. So far as the Cavaliers are concerned he wants no point-producing opportunities overlooked.

Five regulars are back from last fall's high-scoring team, including the men elected cocaptains at the close of the season. They are Henry (Hank) Walker, of Griffin, Ga., selected as All-America end on the Associated Press second team, and Johnny Duda, of Scarsboro, W. Va., high scorer and leading ground-gainer last year. Five reserves who won their letters are back, but most of the 50-odd candidates are young and inexperienced, and few have ever run from the "T" formation.

Frank Thorsey, end coach and former Mississippi cocaptain, believes that Walker is due for another great season. However, the other candidates for flank positions are inexperienced. Bill Pickett of New York City, basketball captain, played a little in the backfield last year. Bob Jameson of Ann Arbor, Mich., a possible starter at right end, has never played football before, while Don Cushing, Franklin, N. H.; Billy White, Charlottesville; Tom Hardy, Farmville, and Jim Manos, Suffolk, are all green material.

It is to the backfield that Murray is giving most of his attention. Charlie Ellis of Harrisonburg again is expected to call signals from the quarterback position, while possibly paired with Duda as a running mate will be Clyde Johnson of Jacksonville, Fla., a letterman who showed up well last fall until he was injured. The fullback spot is wide open and candidates for the berth include Ray Brown of Falls Church moved from end to the backfield because of his punting and passing, and Jay Kennard, a Navy transfer from Duke and a native of Ashland, Ky.

Three veteran tackles have returned to the line. They are Joe Kirkland, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Bill Parrish, Richmond, and Ward Speer, Easton, Md. Al Thomas, the new Cavalier line coach, however, is having his troubles filling center and the guard posts. John Holz, Ambler, Pa., and Johnny Gianakos, Charlottesville, are veterans moved from line positions to play guard with Alex Slavinsky. Three newcomers are being tried for center.

Master Bid Wins Grasmere At Aqueduct

Aqueduct, New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Master Bid and E. B. Benjamin's Edified, a pair of homebred two year olds with similar records, finished a half length apart as named after thrilling 21,007 fans with their six furlong duel in today's featured Grasmere Purse.

The pair performed as their odds would indicate. Master Bid was a $4.70 for two choice in the field of nine and covered the distance in 1:12 4/5 under Ted Atkinson. Edified, next in demand with a crowd only slightly smaller than usual due to a threat of rain, was much the best of the others. The filly beat the long priced Buddie Bones, from Miss Mary Jane O'Leary's barn, by five lengths for the place.

Both Master Bid and Edified had started three times before and each had won a maiden race and failed in two stakes.

Following a good start, Edified forged into a head lead over Master Bid, with Ringoes right alongside the two choices. After the first quarter mile, Ringoes allowed the frotn pair to draw away. They ran as if harnessed into the home lane, where Master Bid, a gelded son of Psychic Bid, drove into a length advantage. Wayne Wright kept Edified to her task and the Jacopo filly had the victor Extended to the limit as they completed the stirring stretch duel. Buddie Bones closed gamely to wear down Ringoes for third position.

The successful Aqueduct session of 12 days winds up tomorrow with a seven-race program, no jumping contest being carded.

Today's attendance was 21,007.

Everything Desirable In Musical Comedy Is in 'Anchors Aweigh'

By Sonia Stein

Whatever practical disadvantages bell bottom trousers may have, they serve to point up and punctuate two of the most valuable factors in "Anchors Aweigh," Technicolor musical show now at the Palace Theater. The cut of the costumes serves ideally to emphasize the youth and insouciance of two sailors on a four-day leave, and also to outline a dancer's body almost as well as the customary leotard of the ballet.

Kathryn Grayson

Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra, who play the leading characters in this honey of a picture, work well together, and in addition to being artists in their respective lines, make excellent comedians, adapting more easily to the subtlety required by the motion picture camera than many a man more experienced in the comedy field.

Kelly is a self-confident, fast-working city slicker. He epitomizes much of the brashness, cleverness, fast-stepping and talking that is associated with New York. Sinatra, albeit from Brooklyn, is a shy little sailor who'd like to learn. Following his pal on shore leave in order to learn the precise and complex art of "wolfing" Sinatra begs Kelly to help him on the grounds that Kelly saved his life at sea and now owes him something.

Puts His Foot in It

Having promised to find him a girl and get him started, Kelly gets him a date, against his own better judgment, with the pretty Aunt Susie of a little boy who had wandered out into the night to join the Navy, and been brought home by the two sailors.

In the course of getting the date, Kelly ruins the girl's chance of meeting Jose Iturbi. Because she is a singer working as a Hollywood dress extra (and very squishly dressed, too) the girl, played by Kathryn Grayson, has to be pacified for the loss of what she regarded as the biggest opportunity in the world, with the promise of an audition by Iturbi. This, says Kelly, is already arranged for by Sinatra, who is a close friend of the pianist.

The rest of the plot revolves around the sailors' attempt to get to Iturbi, who is a stranger to them, in order to fix the matter, and Kelly's gradual submission to Miss Grayson's charms, while Sinatra is accidentally finding a girl who is willing to take the initiative in matters "romantical."

Superb Comedy, Music, Dancing

Describing a girl, Kelly explains that it's not that she's different, but what other girls have that you want, she has more of. What makes this picture the best musical comedy of the year to date, is not only that it's different, and not only that it has more of what you want, but that what it does have is of such wonderful quality. The comedy is light, flippant and wise. The music, provided by Iturbi at the piano (once with a background of about 20 more), Kathryn Grayson and Sinatra, is both well written and well delivered. Fortunately, Kelly sings but rarely. He does, however, dance with more grace, vitality, control and buoyoncy than anybody else in Hollywood.

In two of his dance sequences, he shares this buoyancy with someone else, dancing first with a sad cartoon mouse in a delightful fairy-tale scene, and later with a solemn little Mexican child. It is doubtful that anybody of more physical substance than these two could have kept up with him, although Sinatra does a short and professional turn with him at one point. A later dance gets under way slowly and with maddening bullfighter melodramatics, but develops into something worthy of Kelly's magnificent style.

Pamela Britton, who plays the Brooklyn girl with whom Sinatra falls in love the second time around, sharpened up her abilities in the touring company of "Oklahoma" and now uses them with equal success in this picture. Dean Stockwell is an appealing little boy with nice, clear diction and an evident understanding of his lines.

The whole cast seems delightfully alive with a contagious sense of well being. "Anchors Aweigh" just makes you feel good all over.

The reputations of Iturbi, Sinatra and Kelly are adequate to attract an audience, but assurance that they and the silken-voiced Miss Grayson have many and appropriate opportunities to perform in "Anchors Aweigh" should produce concentric circles of people lined up around the block, to get into the Palace Theater.

Supplementing the feature is the camera account of the Japanese surrender on board the USS Missouri, and a few words from the President.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Cosmopolites

I

They will soon be back in circulation, those people who have been everywhere,
And while of course I have a mind above such things, and do not really care,
I nevertheless fear it will be a little irritating,
And not particularly elucidating,
To hear constant chatter of Cairo, Tripoli, Casablanca, Karachi and Moscow,
Chungking, Chapultepec, Yalta, all the Palace hotels, and every city's Cafe Lido,
And worst of all I'll have to answer to the query, "Where've you been?"
"Right here—you see the travel situation sort of fenced me in."

II

It was bad enough in prewar days to listen to garrulous globe-trotters,
The Paris commuters, the round-the-world cruisers, and the yachters,
Saying, "You remember at Port Said,
That little curio store run by the Arab with the glass eye?"
Or, "You know how in a way Hongkong makes you think of Catalina,— Beg pardon? . . . You don't mean you've never been to China!"
It was even bad enough to have Manhattan addicts ostensibly in the know,
Constantly and casually asking, "When were you last at El Morocco?"

III

Now it will not only be soldiers, sailors, Waves, Wacs and Marines—back from involuntary sightseeing,
But the innumerable civilians who have been investigating, inspecting and refereeing,
The people sent on mysterious missions,
The coordinators, rehabilitators, Congressmen, and atomicians,
Who cover so much territory by Pullman, boat, plane or even legs,
They cannot give the rest of us credit for having other kinds of pegs
On which to get around among people and places of current fame,
Hence in patronizing blindness they remark, "You're just the same!"

IV

It's not that I don't think people should mingle more among their kind,
For I have never been an admirer of the provincial attitude of mind,
It's just that those who skip about the most,
Would do well not to boast
Too much about places and things they've seen, or personalities they've met,
Unless their experiences had obviously garnered them some net,
And by that I don't mean souvenirs, trinkets, diaries, snapshots, or other loot,
But a something that will keep us stay-at-homes from thinking, "Well, what did it boot?"

Underwood & Underwood

CORPORAL'S BRIDE is Mrs. John E. Ashton, who is now living in Texas where her husband is stationed. Before her recent marriage she was Betty Mae Hurdle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hurdle, Washington. Her husband is from Willow Grove, Pa.

LEONARD LYONS
Broadway Glossary

New York, Sept. 14.

KNOWLEDGE: A young scientist who worked on the atomic bomb at Richland, Wash., and who was one of the few who understood what the "Manhattan Project" really was, entered the Army this year. He applied for Officers Candidate School and selected ordnance as his branch. The reviewing board questioned him about ordnance, about mortar shells, etc. He sensed that he wasn't doing too well, and the brilliant young atom-busting chemical engineer finally blurted out: "Well, in my opinion all this stuff seems to be obsolete." He was rejected for OCS, for "lack of broad and detailed knowledge of the branch applied for."

Tallulah Bankhead

MARRIAGE: Tallulah Bankhead was in the Stork Club last night with John Emery, her former husband with whom she is about to tour in "Foolish Notion." One of their friends expressed admiration for Emery's looks and talent. Miss Bankhead agreed that her former husband was both handsome and talented. "But we never were meant for each other," she insisted . . . "Then how'd you come to marry him?" Tallulah was asked. She replied: "Oh, that was just a slip of the tongue."

PRICE: Ferenc Molnar was seen examining the price-scale of tickets at the Majestic Theater where "Carousel," the Rodgers & Hammerstein adaptation of his "Liliom," is playing. When he was asked what he thought of the prices, Molnar told this story: "Once, in Germany, Robert Klein took over the five Reinhardt theaters. Five days after my play, 'The Good Fairy,' opened Klein raised the price of the tickets. I insisted that this would ruin the success of the play. Klein shook his head and said: 'I've been in the theater a long time, and I always mix with the crowds in the lobby during intermission to hear what the customers say. I've heard them say 'It's wonderful, but damn expensive.' Never have I heard ine say 'It's a bore, but cheap.'"

SHOCK: Molnar also tells the story of an English Lord, 80 years old, who held a winning ticket in the Irish Sweepstakes. His family was afraid to tell him that he had won the million-dollar prize for fear that the shock would be too much for his heart. They finally discussed it with His Lordship's doctor, who also was 80 years old. "I understand him," said the doctor, "and I know just how to break the news to him so that it won't affect his heart." The aged doctor went to His Lordship, and began: "What would you do if you suddenly learned that you had won a million dollars in the sweepstakes?" . . . His Lordship told his doctor: "I'd give you half of it." So the doctor dropped dead.

SALE: Bill Chapman of Time magazine once owned an antique shop. A lady inquired about a lard press in the shop and asked "What is that?" Chapman told her. She bought it . . . The proprietor, curious, asked her: Just what are you going to do with it?" . . . "Put it in the corner of my room," she explained. "And when a young man comes a-calling and inevitably there comes that moment of grim silence, my gentleman friend will look in the corner and break the silence by asking, 'What is that?' And I'll be able to tell him 'That's a lard press.'"

CHATTER: Gen. Mark Clark will receive the 1945 Four Freedoms Award of the Italian-American Labor Council. The Premier of Italy will participate in the ceremonies by broadcasting from Rome . . . M. Pathe, founder of the Newsreel Co., will return to Paris this week . . . Ebony Magazine, the first national Negro picture magazine, will be ready on October 1. The first issue will be Life-size and without ads.

HEAT: Last winter, in France, roses were sold at unusually high prices. This winter the sale of roses will be curbed by official price ceilings. The French florists registered protest, insisting that this would be an attempt to regulate romance and loveliness. Researchers then found the memorandum prepared by the lawmaker who first proposed the price ceiling, in which he explained that these winter roses are grown in hot houses which are heated with coal. "And," said the lawmaker, "it is much more important to look at the smile of a child who is warm than to look at a winter-born flower.

FORTUNE: Last year George S. Schneider was killed in a plane crash while flying from Algiers to France to settle the estate of his father, the late Eugene Schneider of the Schneider-Creusot works. The heir's death resulted in a cry for the nationalization of his father's properties, which include the Skoda works, foundries in Poland, two banks, a life insurance company, steel plants in Britain, shipbuilding companies, dairies and soap and candle companies . . . This is how the fortune was made: Many years ago a Prince of Egypt came to Paris and became enamoured of Hortense Schneider, a singer. He invited her to meet him. The invitation, by mistake, went to Mrs. Eugene Schneider, whose husband accompanied her when she met the Prince. Before he left the hotel that night the husband had an order from the Prince for 50 railroad cars. One of those cars now is a museum piece at Cairo's Central Station.

Wacs Have Beauty Shops Even in Remote Areas

By Genevieve Reynolds

When a Wac in the Philippines or New Guinea drops into the PX (Army Exchange Service) for a tube of toothpaste or bottle of ink, she often walks out with a new hairdo or permanent wave. Even in remote areas they have their own beauty parlors.

In the early days when the first Wac contingents went overseas there was no assurance of good grooming services outside their own personal efforts. No longer must a Wac use her helmet as a shampoo basin or keep her hair screwed up in curlers or bobbie pins while she dodges her best GI beau. Now she can make an appointment at a well-equipped modern beauty salon for a facial, manicure or permanent wave. The one difference from here and overseas beauty shops—the customer must take her own fingernail polish if she wants color. And she must supply her own towel.

Operators Are Wacs

Army Exchange Service, Special Services Division, procured and supplied equipment for the beauty salons. Operators were recruited from among Wacs who were professional beauticians in private life. One of the first overseas Wac beauty shops set up in the Pacific was in New Guinea. Then when the Wac detachment was moved to the Philippines shortly after the liberation of Manila, along followed the beautifying equipment.

Upon arrival it was installed in a room in La Salle College, now being used as barracks for the detachment. Soon a landslide business was started as the servicewomen rushed to erase the dust of Manila from their locks and faces.

Reports from Manila indicate that the shop is small but completely equipped. There you can obtain the latest mud pack and other rejuvenating facial treatments in a building with bullet-scarred woodwork and gaping holes, souvenirs of the Japs. Nonetheless, the Wacs added their feminine touch.

Technician Fifth Grade Gertrude L. Gilbert, New York City, found some discarded ammunition paint to transform the interior. A strip of light blue, four feet wide, was painted around the room at eye-level. Wac Gilbert then brushed onto the blue strip murals a motif of deep sea fauna and flora. Several round mirrors break the murals.

Mrs. MacArthur a Customer

Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, a frequent visitor to the Wac area, was given one of the first permanent waves at the Manila shop. Primarily the shop is for detachment use but operators also take care of Army nurses, Red Cross workers and American women in the war-torn city

On opening day more than 100 women clamored for "the works." Technicians Fifth Grade Jeanette Rupp, McKittrick, Calif., Frances M. Novak, Euclid, Ohio, and Rita Meyers, Buffalo, N. Y., Was operators obliged.

The Army feels that the real difference between an unkempt Wac and one who can obtain professional beauty is simply better morale. That applies to the femmes in the steaming jungle as well as cosmopolitan Paris.

Nationally, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its weekly retail review reported that sales were up from 3 to 7 per cent in different parts of the country. A popular trend away from wartime clothing sobriety also was noted.

In the main areas the following increases in retail volume were reported over last year: New England 2 to 6 per cent; East 4 to 8; Middlewest 3 to 7; Northwest 6 to 10; South 7 to 12; Southwest and Pacific Coast 0 to 4.

Furniture Sales Up 19 Per Cent

Washington furniture sales, which have lagged most of this year, showed a sharp upturn of 19 per cent in July over the same 1944 month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. Seven-month sales, however, were 2 per cent under the same 1944 period.

Va. Bank to Double Capital

The Virginia Corporation Commission has issued an amendment to the charter of the State-Planters Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond, doubling its maximum authorized capital common stock—an increase from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000—and increasing its preferred stock to $800,000. H. H. Augustine is president of the bank.

Two Bank Groups to Meet

On next week's schedule are two meeting of interest to Washington bank employes.

On Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. the women's committee of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will hold its annual fall dinner session in the Washington Hotel. Mrs. Chase G. Woodhouse of Connecticut, will speak on "The Future of Women in Banking."

On Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will hold a dinner meeting in the Lee-Sheraton Hotel. Miss Virginia Tomblin of the Morris Plan Bank is section chairman.

Ayres' Views on Outlook

Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., said yesterday that while there was bound to be large scale unemployment during the reconversion period, it should be remembered that it is not depression unemployment.

In his monthly business bulletin, Ayres said that it will be a very special and only temporary form of unemployment, which economists term frictional unemployment.

The banker said that new laws cannot help much in dealing with the problems of this sort of unemployment nor can they be solved by a full employment bill. He added that public works programs will afford but little help.

Despite lay-offs, there has been no important increase in the redemptions of war savings bonds, Ayres pointed out, adding that bonds redeemed still average less than 1 per cent a month.

Bendix Dealers Meet

Approximately 100 Bendix dealers met yesterday in the Hotel Statler to examine the new post-war automatic "washer," and to hear the plans for merchandising and advertising. The meeting was sponsored by Southern Wholesalers, Inc., distributors, and W. E. O'Connor acted as chairman.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP).—Wheat futures continued on the upward path today, but other grains were unable to string along.—Rye dropped more than a cent a bushel in some cases and oats were down almost as much.

Belief that large amounts of domestic wheat will go to Europe continued as a bullish influence in the grain. Traders also heard reports that the Government was starting purchase of 1,000,000 sacks of flour for September-November shipment to England.

Wheat closed ½ higher to ⅛ lower than the previous finish, September 1.67⅝@1.67⅞, after profit-taking cut the advance when September reached 1.68¼, the highest since June; corn was down ⅛ to ¼, December 1.15⅛; oats were ⅛ to ¾ lower, December 66¼; rye was 1¼ down to ⅛ up, September, 1.50⅛@1.50¼, and barley was off ¼ to ¾, September 1.13.
